House Sends Farm Bill to Conference Without Cut

192-181 Vote Rejects Plea to Ask Slash In $1,218,000,000 Senate Measure

Byrd on Spending

Nearer the Limit

By Robert C. Albright.

House economy forces were routed yesterday by a combination of farm, dairy and urban bloc members as a 192-to-181 vote sent the record $1,218,000,000 Senate farm bill to conference without any instructions to cut it.

The 11-vote margin reversed a former House stand against unbudgeted parity price payments to farmers, and left conferees free to accept as much of the $382,000,000 Senate farm bill increase as they choose.

Vainly, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, warned it was a last stand for economy, and reminded members of the President's request for new taxes to finance the increase.

Roosevelt Recalls Promise

"This is your only opportunity to express yourselves," the Virginian admonished. "If this bill passes Congress and the President signs it, there is no use for anyone to get up and talk about economy any more."

The President meanwhile at a press conference reiterated to reporters his former statement that Congress by resolution had promised last year to provide taxes to finance proposed parity payments. But he pointed out that Congress, and not the White House, is the taxing and appropriating body.

His comment was in response to a question on yesterday's House speech by Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee, assailing contentions that taxes must be levied to finance farm increases alone. Jones argued that billions have been appropriated for relief and national defense without additional taxes.

Party Lines Crossed

Yesterday's House vote came on an economy bloc attempt to vote down the "previous question" and amend a special House rule so conferees could be "instructed" to oppose Senate increases.

A capitulation showed 161 Democrats joined with 28 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 2 Progressives in the vote to leave conferees "free," while 53 Democrats, 127 Republicans and 1 American Laborite sought to bind them.

Fewer Democrats than voted for parity price payments when the bill was first before the House opposed yesterday's economy plea, but eight Republicans who previously fought the unbudgeted increase switched to the spending line-up.

Western Votes Decisive

This shift was accounted for by Western dairy section popularity of the $113,000,000 for surplus removal carried in the Senate bill. Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, who previously led urban members against parity payment, also switched to farm bloc support with a few other urbanites.

House Minority Leader Martin said he believed the President's Monday night defense of prosperity spending was at least in part responsible for the House reversal.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, manager of the House conferees, who triumphed in his long tug of war with Woodrum over parity price spending, said despite the House vote he regarded himself "instructed" to stand by the lower House farm figure.

Conferees Held Ready to Yield

"But what can we do if the Senate refuses to yield?" he asked.

Cannon was the original House sponsor this session of parity price appropriations, defeated in the House, but reinserted in the Senate. Economy bloc members charged two of the three House conferees, including Cannon, will yield to the Queen Wilhelmina Visiting Belgium

Brussels, May 23 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, accompanied by Foreign Minister J. A. N. Patijn, arrived today for a state visit to Belgium.

She was greeted at the railway station by King Leopold, who kissed her hand while thousands of spectators massed around the station cheered.

The Royal Progress

By Edward T. Folliard

Aboard the Royal Pilot Train en Route to Winnipeg, May 23.—A shadow of anxiety hung over the royal train today, following news of Queen Mary's injury in a London traffic accident. Word of the mishap reached Their Majesties at midafternoon in Jackfish, a coaling station.

Despite the incident, however, King George and Queen Elizabeth carried on with their many scheduled—and some unscheduled—visits to Canadian communities as the train sped them across Canada's northern lake country toward Winnipeg, where the King will broadcast an "empire message" tomorrow to his 500,000,000 subjects all over the world.

King George's valet, Thomas Jeram, got his first chance to relax today. Thomas, custodian of the King's 60 uniforms and 40 nonmilitary outfits, has had a busy time of it since Quebec, helping His Majesty change five and six times a day. Miss Catherine (Catta) MacLean, the Queen's dresser, has been no less busy. Today, however, it was 5 p. m. before Their Majesties had to "dress up" and resume the

Parliament Approves Plan For Palestine

Opposition Declares Policy Would Poison Relations With U. S.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 23.—The British government won approval in both houses of Parliament for its new Palestine plan tonight despite opposition taunts that the policy was "another victory for Hitler and Mussolini" and would "poison" relations with the United States.

As an amendment to the motion for approval was withdrawn in the House of Lords, the House of Commons defeated a similar amendment, 281 to 181, and voted approval of the plan, 268 to 179.

The government's white paper, announcing the plan to create an independent Palestine state which Jews claim will leave them a permanent minority among the Arabs, next will be placed before the permanent mandates committee of the League of Nations.

Laborite Herbert Morrison asserted "the agents of Hitler and Mussolini seem to have the habit of lodging bombs in suitcases in various places. It has happened in Jerusalem and I gather it is happening in London. A large part of the disturbances in Palestine can be traced to Germany and Italy."

Liberal Sir Archibald Sinclair, referring to American public opinion, declared the hostility of the Irish people for generations "had poisoned our relations with the people of the United States," and added:

"That hostility is now happily allayed, but if we accept these pro-

Roosevelt Defers Works Credit Idea

Sees No Prospect Now Of Adopting Proposal Offered by Berle

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that consideration had been given a plan put forward by Assistant Secretary of State Adolph A. Berle, jr., to set up a Public Works Finance Corporation to finance, at low interest rates, a large program of construction projects.

The proposal was discussed two months ago, the President said, but he did not know what had happened to it. There was no prospect, he added, that the Administration will attempt to carry out the idea immediately.

Berle, appearing yesterday before the Monopoly Committee, outlined the proposal as an initial step in a broad program for overhauling the Nation's credit machinery.

Variable Interest Urged

From a long-term point of view, he advocated creation of a system of non-profit capital credit banks to advance capital funds to small business and to the Federal and local governments for public works.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, announced afterward that a subcommittee probably would be appointed to study and submit recommendations on the whole problem of supplying capital needs.

Berle, who has served as brain truster intermittently for the President and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, presented his own formula for using idle savings to create jobs. The President has asked the com-

Dafoe 'Ridiculed' Dionnes, Canadian Court Writ Charges

By the United Press.

North Bay, Ont., May 23.—A writ charging that he had been held up to ridicule and lampooned by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe during the physician's initiation into the Circus Saints and Sinners Club in New York was issued by the Supreme Court here today in favor of Oliva Dionne, father of the famous quintuplets.

No stated amount of damages was contained in the writ, which named Mrs. Dionne and the quints as plaintiffs as well as Dionne.

Dafoe, who brought the five girls into the world almost five years ago and has attended them ever since, was initiated into the New York luncheon club, which customarily puts its prominent new members through an initiation based on lampooning of their activities, on April 12. He appeared in a long white apron inscribed "Doctor of Litters" and carried a satchel labeled "Mass Delivery." This, according to Dionne's suit, held him and his family up to ridicule.

The suit was filed two weeks ago, but Dionne withheld service until today because of the presentation of the quints to King George and Queen Elizabeth in Toronto yesterday. Dr. Dafoe was with the Dionnes and their famous daughters at the time.

Schulte Splits Milk Inquiry, Pushes Bill

Seal Challenges Indianan to Prove Corruption Charges Against Officials

By James D. Secrest.

The District milk investigation yesterday took on the aspects of a two-ring circus as the House subcommittee on public health split in two factions for separate hearings.

Following a turbulent morning session, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, broke away from the principal inquiry and started a hearing of his own on his bill to open the Washington milk market to Western milk and cream. At the same time Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, continued the investigation authorized by the House.

Bewildered dairy farmers were in a dilemma as Schulte invited interested parties to attend his hearing. They were torn between loyalty to B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, who was testifying before the Bates subcommittee and a desire to testify against the Schulte bill.

$1,500 Approved for Inquiry

Other developments of a day of confusion were:

The House Accounts Committee approved a request of the Bates subcommittee for $1,500 additional to continue the inquiry.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee addressed a letter to Attorney General Murphy asking that two G-men be assigned to the investigation.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal arose in wrath to refute innuendoes of bribery of District officials by Representative Schulte as spectators applauded and shouted.

Shulte, announcing day and night hearings on his bill, disclosed that a move will be made to adjourn the Bates subcommittee hearings for a week or ten days at the end of this week.

More fireworks were promised today as Derrick continues his testimony before the Bates subcommittee in the House caucus room, while Schulte conducts a rival hearing of farmers in the District Committee room.

Seal Challenges Schulte

Yesterday's hearing opened with a bang before a packed Labor Committee room, but slumped into factual testimony after Schulte had opened a rival sideshow. Brawny Maryland and Virginia farmers sat on the edge of their seats as Seal arose and shook his finger at Schulte while demanding that he prove his insinuations of official corruption or shut up.

"Punch him in the face," shouted one overenthusiastic farmer as Chairman Bates rapped for order.

But he didn't explain whether he was suggesting that Seal punch Schulte or vica versa.

Flushing with anger, Seal had arisen in his chair while Schulte was questioning Derrick about Berlin, May 23.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler summoned the highest military leaders in the Third Reich to a conference in the chancellery this evening. Twenty-five generals and admirals attended.

Although no report of the meeting has been made, it is believed the subject under discussion was the more definite military position of Germany in Europe, following signing yesterday of the ten-year alliance with Italy.

The chancellor also may have talked with his advisers about reports that Great Britain and Soviet Russia are near agreement, but it is doubted attention was given to the Polish problem.

U. S. Traces $39,850 Paid Manton Aide

Litigant Declares He Never Dealt With Judge But Feared 'Ill Will'

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 23.—The Government submitted testimony today designed to show that $39,850 had been paid to an accused intermediary of former United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton by Alfred F. Reilly, Massachusetts industrialist, for judicial favors in patent litigation.

Testifying in Manton's trial on charges of entering a conspiracy to sell his judicial integrity, Reilly, president of the Evans Case Co., of North Attleboro, Mass., said he had made a series of payments to William J. Fallon, who, the prosecution claims, solicited bribes for Manton as a go-between.

Fallon has pleaded guilty to conspiring with Manton and probably will testify for the Government.

Reilly, insisting he had not regarded the payments to Fallon as bribes, but rather that he had made them because he was afraid to incur his "ill will," said he never had dealt with Manton himself.

"I never met Mr. Manton," he explained, "until after the litigation in the patent case was over, and I never personally gave him a dollar. I never discussed the case with him."

Murphy, Hoover On Way to Act In Coast 'Swindle'

El Paso, Tex., May 23 (AP).—Attorney General Murphy, alighting from a West-bound plane, declared he would go to Los Angeles tomorrow to "begin personal investigation of an enormous swindle." He did not reveal nature of the "swindle."

"I sent a man to Los Angeles three weeks ago to make a survey," he said. "He will meet me at the airport and we will go straight to the courthouse."

He added a grand jury is to start this week on an investigation in Chicago similar to that which has taken place in Kansas City.

The Attorney General was accompanied by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Save the Ship, Is Brother's Plea

New Orleans, May 23 (U.P.).—Arthur Naquin said tonight he believed his brother, Lieut. Oliver F. Naquin, of the sunken submarine Squalus, would "come out of it all right."

"We are not worried for fear he will lose his life," he said. "We only hope that he will bring his ship up safely."

Mrs. Ida Naquin, mother of the officer, said at her home in Alexandria, La., that she, too, believed her son would be saved.

President Confident of Rescue; 27 Fly From D. C. to Help

Divers, Doctors Speed by Air to Begin Work Of Freeing Crew; New Equipment Responsible For Hope of Saving Men on 8-month-Old Craft

Despite some unfavorable indications, naval officials were still hopeful early this morning that the crew of the submarine U. S. S. Squalus, sunk off Portsmouth, N. H., in 240 feet of water, will be brought up alive.

Earlier, President Roosevelt said he was definitely hopeful that the crew of the Navy's newest undersea craft will be saved.

Naval officials, likewise, were "anxiously hopeful" that all or most of the 59 men trapped will be saved, despite the fact naval history has never recorded a rescue from the great ocean depths that hold the ill-fated ship.

New rescue equipment developed at the Washington Navy Yard since the U. S. submarine S-4 sank off Provincetown, Mass., December 17, 1927, is responsible for the Government's optimism in the face of its fifth major undersea disaster.

The President told the press that the entire Government was cooperating in getting all possible equipment and personnel to the scene, and that all aboard were all right at present.

Officials said these four methods of rescuing the submerged crew may be used:

Send divers down to close the valve that is believed to have caused the accident. Then attach compressed air hoses to emergency valves and blow the water out of ballast tanks. The boat will then rise, it is hoped.

Lower the rescue chamber, or diving bell, from the submarine rescue vessel Falcon. Divers would then fit the bell over an escape hatch of the submarine and take up the crew eight at a time in the bell.

Use the "Momsen lung," named for Lieut. Comdr. C. B. Momsen, leading submarine expert attached to the Navy Yard here, which would bring members of the crew to the surface singly with but little outside aid.

Raise the vessel itself by means of pontoons.

The entire experimental diving unit at the Navy Yard here was rushed to the scene, Lieut. Comdr. Momsen, 23 officers and divers and three doctors left during the afternoon from the Anacostia Naval Air Station aboard five planes.

Officers and men from the navy yard diving unit rushed to Portsmouth included Lieut. Comdr. C. B. Momsen, Comdr. A. R. McCann, Lieut. T. M. Willmon, Lieut. (J. G.) K. R. Wheland, W. H. Squire, C. F. J. Crocker, J. E. Duncan, B. G. Jones, I. B. Lewis, R. M. Metzger, G. Bergner, T. Crittenden, L. Zampiglione, F. L. Westbrook, J. W. Thompson and F. W. O'Keefe, and Lieuts. S. A. Johnson, A. C. Behnke, O. D. Yarborough, J. H. McDonald, W. Badders, T. W. Forrester, H. H. Frye and F. S. Smith. Behnke, Willmon and Yarborough are medical experts. Three other members of the group were unidentified.

The submarine rescue vessel, Falcon, and the U. S. S. Semmes are proceeding at top speed from New London, Conn., to the spot 5 miles south of White Island, Isle of Shoals, where the submarine lies on a soft mud bottom. The character of the bottom, shown by naval charts, may make efforts to raise the craft somewhat difficult, officers said.

Later reports received here, however, cast doubt on the chances of

Squalus Sailor Feared Disaster, Asked 'Ma' to Pray

Boston, May 23 (AP).—A sailor's premonition that the third run of the Squalus might be ill fated was revealed tonight by Mrs. Francis J. Murphy, mother of First Class Quartermaster Francis X. Murphy, on the Squalus.

"My boy said the Squalus was stuck for more than an hour while on a week's cruise that ended last Friday," she said.

"'Another 50 feet lower and we would have been cooked, Ma,'" Mrs. Murphy quoted him as saying on a visit home over the week-end. "'I want you to pray for me while I am on this trip.'"

D. C. Family Offers Prayer For Son Aboard the Squalus

"Every mother knows how I feel."

Her handkerchief gripped tightly in her hands, Mrs. Richard Isaacs, mother of the only Washington man trapped in the submarine Squalus off the New Hampshire coast, waited long hours by the radio for news of the rescue work.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Isaacs, who live at 4509 Beck street southeast, said their 31-year-old son, William, had been in submarines most of ten years of his service in the Navy. "If prayer can save him, he's all right," said his mother. "We all pray for him every night."

As a boy in their former home on C street southeast, William was a radio fan, building everything from a crystal set to a small broadcasting set. He went into the Navy hoping for a radio career, but became a cook.

"He's a smart boy," said his brother Robert. "He left school after the eighth grade, and picked it all up himself out of books. He joined the Navy because he wanted to see the world and learn a trade at the same time."

"And he was a good boy," put in Mrs. Isaacs. "Only the other day he sent me a beautiful Mother's Day card. I've kept every letter he ever wrote. I have kept his first one and his last. I only hope they pull him up all right."

'Conditions Good, but Cold,' Officer Taps From Inside Craft 240 Feet Under Sea

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, N. H. (Wednesday), May 24. — Cheered by a four-word message from 59 officers and men entombed in the crippled submarine Squalus, U. S. Navy divers rushed equipment aboard a fast patrol boat today preparatory to beginning actual rescue attempts.

"Conditions satisfactory, but cold . . ." was the message spelled out by the men in code by taps on the steel hull of the sunken submarine 240 feet below the surface of the Atlantic Ocean, approximately 15 miles off this port.

Shortly after this dot-and-dash bulletin from the Squalus was picked up by listening devices on the surface, diving experts from Washington arrived at the Navy Yard and swung into action. They packed equipment on the Coast Guard patrol boat 409 and made ready to rush to the scene later this morning.

Conflicting theories on the safety of the trapped men were rife in the Navy Yard but a Navy spokesman said there was no indication that any of the men are dead despite that the officers have learned the after compartments of the submarine were filled with water.

Rests in Soft Mud

The Squalus, newest of the Nation's submarines, rested upright and on an even keel in soft mud on the ocean floor approximately 15 miles off this port. An open air induction valve during a routine practice dive at 8:40 a. m. yesterday had poured water into the ship, pinning her to the bottom.

(The Navy Department said the craft was tilted at a 15-degree angle, though maintaining its port-starboard equilibrium.)

But a systematic effort to free the entombed crew apparently awaited the arrival of the submarine rescue ship Falcon.

Moving under forced draft from its New London, Conn., base, the Falcon was scheduled to arrive at dawn today, and officers said several hours might elapse after that before a concerted diving effort could be made.

Able to "Hold On" for Days

Naval officials reported, however, that emergency supplies of oxygen should allow those on board to "hold on" for days, if necessary. All those alive were given "a pretty good chance" to see daylight again.

Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, who was directing rescue operations from aboard the submarine Sculpin, sister ship of the Squalus, which was anchored at the scene, told newsmen tonight that the Navy's primary consideration was the safety of those trapped below.

"We will get the crew out first, and then blow out the vessel," Admiral Cole asserted. "We will take everyone out whether we lose the submarine or not."

Others aboard the Sculpin revealed that the cable holding the buoy sent up from the Squalus had been broken and that the sunken submarine actually had been "lost" for hours today. A heavy wave had thrown the Sculpin to one side while it was in telephone communication with the Squalus, breaking all lines holding the

Skwaylus, Not Squallus, Is How to Say Squalus

New York, May 23 (AP).—Although some seamen pronounced the name of the stricken submarine "Squallus," Webster's New International Dictionary says it should be "Skway-lus." Squalus, from the Latin, means "a large sea fish."

Senator Borah is restive because of tactful efforts to defer neutrality debate till after the King and Queen go home . . . Both the State Dept. and the White House have their bad moments about Mrs. Roosevelt's irrepressible flair for candor—especially about royal visits. She has even discussed the royal bedroom.

At long last, it develops that the removal of the White House hedge was not merely a kindly gesture to let the tourists gape at the back yard . . .

Without the hedge, it's much more difficult for an intruder to get over the iron picket fence unobserved; which is something to keep in mind, with almost everyone in the Capital convinced he knows in which bedroom the King will sleep.

Choice of the movies shown upstairs at the White House is largely in the hands of Missy Lehand, the President's personal secretary. Occasionally the President or Mrs. Roosevelt expresses a preference. Which pictures they see in the broad second floor hallway is almost a state secret. The White House doesn't want its movie tastes publicized or any actors played up as Presidential favorites.

When the rumor got around that Harry Hopkins had argued with the President rather warmly, during a week-end on the Potomac, the White House scoffed at the story . . . If it had been true, then Mr. Hopkins' presence on the sofa at the President's right, at the White House press conference next day, and his tete-a-tete lunch with FDR the following day would, of course, have scotched any gossip of a disagreement.

Sharp-eyed observers, however, noticed that that particular press conference was more than 20 minutes late in starting. When the scribes entered the oval office, there on the sofa beside the President's desk, along with Hopkins, sat FDR's naval aide, handsome Capt. Callaghan, and his military aide, jovial Gen. If perchance we Americans don't fight on England's side in the next war, then the credit, in the opinion of some vulgah people, may rightly belong in part to an American girl—the one who became Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador. There would be something dramatic, almost biblical, in such a dramatic role.

Quite unintentionally, her patrician handling of invitations for the embassy garden party for Their Majesties has made some influential but ultra-sentative Americans wonder whether we're so close to the English, after all . . . Maybe she has done more to keep us neutral than all the sophomoric bills introduced by all the sophomoric Congressmen and Senators on the Hill . . . But she has had an impossibly difficult task, trying to squeeze 13,000 King-worshiping Americans into a space for 1,300 . . . Witness Ties U. S. Anti-Reds To Reich, Italy

Quarrels With Dies; Says Groups Here Have 'Contacts' in Europe

A national anti-Communist organization with a strong anti-Semitic flavor, united under "a leader like Gen Moseley," was envisaged to the Dies Committee yesterday by George Edward Deatherage, aggressive chieftain of the Knights of the White Camelia.

Many anti-Communist societies now are in "contact" with the "international movement," said Deatherage, as he declared his organization had a "liaison" with a group known as the "C. U. R." in Italy and an "international anti-Communist association" with headquarters in Erfurt, Germany.

Deatherage, who at the beginning of his testimony virtually challenged Chairman Dies to a fight, provided a sharp contrast to tight-lipped Felix McWhirter, Indiana bank president, who preceded him to the witness stand.

McWhirter, a Republican Party official and officer in the Naval Reserve, expressed emphatic disapproval of anti-Semitism as "un-American," but proved unable to remember many of the details of correspondence he had exchanged with his "tried and proven friend," James. E. Campbell, a dabbler in Republican Party politics and distributor of anti-Semitic reports.

Accused by Representative Thomas. New Jersey Republican, of "dodging questions," McWhirter insisted he had forgotten the source of inofrmation he referred to in a letter as late as April 11.

This letter, addressed to "Jim" and signed "Felix," informed Campbell that "from reliable information received, I understand that (Gen.) Moseley is being very thoroughly shadowed." McWhirther said he was unable to recall from whom he obtained the information.

Later, when Democratic member of the committee repeatedly questioned McWhirther about his motives in referring Campbell to Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee, Thomas angrily objected that "the inference is to smear the Republican Party."

McWhirter stated he thought Campbell's reports of a "plot" to overthrow the Government were "fantastic," although he asked Hamilton to give Campbell an hour and a half of his time.

Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, suggested that McWhirter, as a Naval Reserve officer, might have told the naval officials of the "plot." McWhirter retored that "the history of the Government shows a complete stoppage after 1924 of anything that had to do with subversion."

Would Follow Moseley

Deatherage, tall, 47, told of his close association with Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, retired former commander of the Fourth Corps Area, who is also under subpena of the committee.

Rhea Whiteley, committee counsel, ran over a list of anti-Semitic groups, with all of which Deatherage was more or less familiar. He described his contacts with leaders of the various societies.

When Whiteley suggested that "with the right leader—say, like Gen Moseley—would a lot of these organizations join in the movement?" Deatherage readily responded, "Oh, yes—you could get 500 of them overnight."

Challenges Dies

Deatherage threw the crowded committee room into an uproar as he was about to be sworn in when he demanded of Dies an "assurance that this is a Christian oath."

"Did you ever hear of any other kind?" Dies replied. "Raise your right hand." After the oath, the chairman warned Deatherage to answer questions without elaboration. An angry exchange followed, culminating in Dies' shouted order to Deatherage to "sit down."

"You come over here and make me sit down," challenged the witness. But by that time, two brawny policeman—one of whom had reached for his blackjack—were beside Deatherage, who unceremoniously sat down.

Leaders Split Territory

Deatherage said the difficulty in getting various anti-Communist groups together lay in finding a leader who could inspire confidence.

He testified he had met William Dudley Pelley, head of the Silvershirts, and "we helped each other." Deatherage added that "I stayed out of his territory pretty much and he stayed out of mine."

He said he also had been in contact with the Rev. Gerald Winrod, defeated in the Kansas Republican senatorial primaries last year, and Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American Bund, though he said he had met Kuhn only once.

Like Klansman's Oath

Deatherage refused to reveal the number of Knights of the White Camellia, as he said he was bound by a secret oath—"the same as the Klansman's oath." The organization, he said, had members throughout the Union except in the New England States, which "are so blinkin' stubborn we can't do anything with them."

McWhirter, slight and gray-haired, was asked about a letter he had written Campbell, inquiring if Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, had Jewish blood, and whether Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate in 1936, and William Allen White, Kansas publisher, had Jewish connections.

McWhirter said he wanted to save those persons from future embarrassment, as an unnamed organization had been attempting to attach itself to them. Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, remarked that the explanation "certainly is broad."

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

The Gallup Poll

Hull Runs Neck-and-Neck With Dewey And Taft in 'Trial Heat' Poll on 1940

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, May 23.—If Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, were to run for President on the Democratic ticket against Thomas E. Dewey on the Republican ticket, voters expressing a choice today would be about evenly divided in their preference, with a slight majority favoring Dewey, according to a special "trial heat" survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

A hypothetical race between Hull and Senator Robert A. Taft, another prominently mentioned G. O. P. candidate, likewise ends in a photo-finish.

To determine the relative vote-pulling power of the veteran Tennessee statesman against these two Republican contenders, the institute asked a cross-section of voters throughout the country these questions:

"If Cordell Hull runs for President in 1940 on the Democratic ticket and Thomas Dewey runs against him on the Republican ticket, which one do you think you would prefer?"

Dewey	52%
Hull	48

Approximately two voters in every 10 (18 per cent) expressed no opinion.

"If Cordell Hull runs for President in 1940 on the Democratic ticket and Robert Taft runs against him on the Republican ticket, which one do you think you would prefer?"

Taft	50

Another popular Democratic candidate is Vice President John N. Garner. In a survey reported several weeks ago, the institute matched a Democratic ticket headed by Garner against a Republican ticket headed by Dewey and found the two running virtually neck and neck, Garner receiving 48 per cent to 52 per cent for Dewey. When Taft's name was placed at the head of a Republican ticket running against Garner, the result was the same.

These studies in vote-pulling power indicate that, at the present time, each of the major political parties has at least two leading candidates who are fairly evenly matched against two leading candidates in the other party. Hull and Garner for the Democrats run neck and neck with Dewey and Taft for the Republicans.

There are, of course, many other potential candidates in the field, and the institute will, in coming months, test the vote-pulling power of nearly all of them.

In today's trial heats between Hull and Dewey and Hull and Taft, virtually all the Landon voters of 1936 stick with the party. But not all of the 1936 Roosevelt voters favor Hull. About one-fourth say they would switch parties to vote for either Dewey or Taft.

	Favor Hull	Favor Dewey
1936 Landon voters	9%	91%
1936 Roosevelt voters	72	28

	Favor Hull	Favor Taft
1936 Landon voters	8%	92%
1836 Roosevelt voters	75	25

Hull's chief popular strength is the South and the Far West, and among voters in the lower income levels, whereas Dewey and Taft are especially popular in the East and Midwest and among voters in the upper income levels.

Those who favor Hull give as their reason that he is a statesman of "wide experience and training." Those voters who favor Dewey or Taft give as their reason that they are planning to vote the straight Republican ticket, and that the country "needs a change of party."

Senate Committee Minority Report Assails Bill Requiring Wool Labeling

By the Associated Press.

Legislation that would require labeling of wool products was attacked yesterday as an unnecessary "control of business" by a minority of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in a report filed by Senator Austin (Republican), Vermont.

SEN. AUSTIN

The bill previously reported favorably by the committee, would require labeling of all wool products shipped in interstate commerce to show the percentage of virgin wool, reclaimed wool, and other fibers.

Austin predicted the legislation would raise the cost of wool products for consumers, diminish consumption of wool, and force "the closing of plants which are now struggling through the depression in a precarious financial condition."

The minority report also contended that the bill's definition of "virgin wool" would establish a monopoly.

House committee consideration of the Townsend old-age pension bill halted suddenly yesterday because, one member said, its sponsors had forgotten to include one of their main points—the compulsory spending clause.

This clause would require that the monthly pensions be expended by the recipients within the following month. Dr. Francis E. Townsend and Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida the Ways and Means Committee was informed, wish to offer the necessary amendment.

The committee probably will act on the revised measure as soon as Hendricks prepares the amendment.

A House Judiciary Committee dealt an apparently fatal setback to a Navy-backed resolution claiming Federal ownership of the subsea petroleum deposits off the California Coast.

Four of the five-man group met in executive session and agreed unanimously to report the proposal adversely.

Retailers Told To Stick by Government

Department Store Head Offers Liberal Program to Convention

A platform founded on close co-operation by business with the Government and the consumer, strikingly liberal in general tone, was advanced yesterday at the close of the American Retail Federation's two-day convention by Louis E. Kirstein, chairman of the federation's trustee board.

In marked contrast to the "no quarter," anti-Administration resolutions of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which met here early this month, Kirstein's statement of "general principles" advocated that his listeners—retail merchants ranging from the corner grocery store owner to the tycoons of huge metropolitan department stores—recognize their responsibility for close Federal co-operation, accept collective bargaining and consumers' co-operatives, join with the Government in a common fight against monopoly, support social security programs and fight State encroachments on the free flow of trade.

Wallace, O'Mahoney Speak

Earlier, at its luncheon meeting, the federation heard Agriculture Secretary Wallace state that the "real solution" to the farm and other economic problems was the resumption of the private capital flow into investment channels. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, another speaker, scored price-raising practices which depend on restricted production.

Kirstein, vice president of William Filene Son's Co., Boston, Mass., department store, where President Roosevelt's son, John, is employed, pointed out that the federation's by-laws precluded passage of resolutions. Instead, he presented ten conclusions "on which retailers can agree." They were:

Recognition by the retail industry of responsibility "for close, earnest and intelligent co-operation with Federal, State and local governments in striving for solution of the major social and economic problems of the present day."

Support for all governmental efforts to raise the living standard and provide expanded markets.

Support for movements to correlate Federal, State and local taxation.

Recognition of the Government's responsibility to provide social security.

Acknowledgment of consumers' right for full information on all products, with the retailer responsible for proper representations of merchandise sold.

Opposition "to monopolistic and restrictive practices which tend to retard the flow of goods" and to practices depending on misrepresentation or absence of free competition to sell goods.

Recognition of consumers' co-operatives "as a legitimate form of retail distribution," not to be unfairly aided, however, by direct or indirect Government subsidization or special privileges.

Opposition to all legislative and administrative barriers between States which have tariff-like effects.

Recognition of farmers' plight and of need for co-operation with the Government to dispose of agricultural surpluses "through recognized distributive channels."

Acceptance of the principle of collective bargaining and recognition as the primary concern of retailers "the working conditions, wages and hours of their employes, reasonable security of employment and the cultivation of opportunities for their advancement."

Glass, Byrd Extolled

The only discordant voice in the symphony of business-Administration harmony yesterday was that of John W. Rudin, merchant in the Ohio town of Mount Vernon, who extolled conservative Democratic Senators Glass and Byrd as trying to "call a halt to many of the unsound and un-American ideas advanced by the New Dealers."

Secretary Wallace declared that "for ten years capital has been shell-shocked as a result of the exploding of the boom of the '20's. Under ordinary circumstances, it would have recovered by this time, but the general world picture, with war alarms being sounded in Europe almost every week, has generated a new set of fears.

"Farmers would like to see the businessmen taking a chance again . . . The time to invest money is when business recovery is just starting, not when a boom bubble is ready to burst," he concluded, noting that flowing capital will increase mass purchasing power and directly aid farm sales.

Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board, Sears Roebuck & Co., formerly economic adviser to the Secretary of Commerce, urged businessmen to take more responsibility in social and governmental movements.

House Votes to Lift 30 Billion Limit on Treasury Bonds

Debate on Bill Enlivened By Attack on President's Spending Speech to Retailers

The House yesterday approved the Administration's recommendation for "greater flexibility in the management of the public debt" by voting to remove the present $30,000,000,000 limitation on Treasury bonds outstanding.

While not affecting the aggregate debt limit of $45,000,000,000, the measure gives Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau power to issue the balance in bonds, instead of short term notes and bills as now required.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton told the House it would "enable the Treasury to continue its efforts to finance the needs of the Government in the most economical manner possible," but the measure brought charges of "inflation" from the Republican aside, and a general minority assault on Administration spending and debt policies.

President's Speech Attacked

Meanwhile, from the Senate, came a bitter attack by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, on the President's Monday night defense of his spending program and his suggestion that the debt be considered in relation to the Nation's assets.

Byrd charged the President has "adopted hook, line and sinker the (Reserve Board Chairman) Eccles philosophy of spending and lending to purchase prosperity" and of "popularizing debt by minimizing its evils."

"To minimize the evils of debt—to make debt popular—is a dangerous doctrine to preach," said Byrd. "When the day of reckoning comes, as it inevitably must, the people of America will know to their sorrow that the payment of debt is vastly different from spending the proceeds."

Conservative Democrats and Republicans echoed Byrd's criticism, but New Deal Democrats generally highly praised it. Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, who yesterday repulsed a House economy attack on the farm bill, called it a "great speech."

The President's address before the American Retail Federation was drawn into the Treasury bond bill debate as Representative Fish (Republican', of New York, accused Mr. Roosevelt of committing the Democratic Party to a policy of "spend more, tax more and incur more debts." Doughton answered that the speech "needs no apology," and told reporters it "voiced my views."

The attack on the Treasury bond measure was led by Representative Wolcott(Republican), of Michigan, who declared extension of the right to issue $15,000,000,000 in bonds might lead to "inflation" by tempting the Administration to issue more currency in lieu of securities. Wolcott's attempt to limit the new bond issuance to $3,000,000,000 was defeated, 74 to 40. Later when he tried to recommit the bill, he was turned back, 139 to 54, and the bill passed without a record vote.

Schafer Effort Ruled Out

An effort by Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to remove tax exemptions from the new bond issues was ruled out on a point of order.

Answering Republican "inflation" charges, Representatives McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Cooper, of Tennessee (Democrats), asserted the question was not remotely involved in the bill, explaining the measure merely removed the present "dividing line" between the limits on Treasury bonds and short-term notes. Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, House inflation bloc leader, said the possibility of inflation would be increased if the House failed to pass the bill.

The Treasury is now within $1,697,026,819 of the existing bond limit, while it has power to issue new obligations of all kinds up to about $5,000,000,000 more. Under the bill, the Treasury could issue this full amount in bonds, instead of notes, and in addition meet maturing bonds by issuance of notes.

Byrd, in his statement on the President's speech, charged the people are being "educated to believe spending is the only means of promoting prosperity." He declared Federal agents have visited communities and urged acceptance of public funds "as a patriotic contribution to recovery."

The Virginian took particular exception to the President's statement that "a large part of the Government debt is offset by debts owed to the Government." Byrd said the guaranteed obligations of numerous Government lending corporations are not included in the published debt. If they were, he said the debt would stand at $46,539,000,000 instead of $40,229,000,000. The losses from the debts of the Government corporations, he declared, "are certain to be large and must be paid by direct taxation."

To the President's argument that the national debt is an internal debt, and taxpayers will be paying interest on it to themselves, Byrd replied that the average local, State and national debt amounts to $1,600 per family and asked: "How many families own $1,600 of public bonds and will draw their share of the interest of which Mr. Roosevelt speaks? We know that one-half of the Federal debt is owned by the banks."

Bill Introduced To Take 2,000 Cabs Off Street

Taxis Would Be Cut to 400 for Each 100,000 Population in District

Taxicabs in the District would be reduced from 4,600 to approximately 2,600 by a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee.

The Randolph bill followed a report released yesterday morning by Representative McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, on the Washington taxicab situation, and is based on its findings.

Under its provisions the Public Utility Commission would be empowered to limit the number of taxicabs to not more than 400 for each 100,000 population and the number of taxicab drivers to not more than 600 per 100,000 population.

The reduction would be made by voluntary surrender of licenses—as agreed to by some of the cab associations favoring the legislation—and by expirations.

No new licenses would be issued until the number falls below the new quota, but no outstanding licenses would be revoked or rescinded. A year or more would be needed to get the number down.

More significant than the number reduction proposed was the provision that no license to operate a taxicab could be issued except to persons entitled to immediate possession of the vehicles. This clause was designed to "break up the taxicab racket" under which finance companies allegedly have been able to control large cab fleets, it was said.

"An undetermined, but large percentage of all taxicab drivers in Washington who supposedly are purchasing their cabs have neither a written agreement nor a utilities license in their own name. These men and women have paid the license fee for a license which is in the name of the finance company or fleet operator," McArdle said in his sub-committee report.

Another provision of the bill would make it impossible for persons holding other jobs to operate taxicabs on a part-time or after-work basis.

Morris Picked As U. S. District Judge Here

Floridian Resigns Post as Assistant Attorney General

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated James W. Morris, of Florida, to be associate justice of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

This was exclusively forecast in The Post yesterday.

At the same time Attorney General Murphy announced Morris' resignation from the Department of Justice, where he has served as assistant Attorney General in charge of the tax division.

Although there were some expressions of regret that a Washingtonian was not named to the new position, Capitol Hill committee members expected an early and favorable report on the nomination.

Fills Second Vacancy

Morris will fill one of the two new judgeships created for the District by the last Congress. Representative Alan T. Goldsborough, of Maryland, was named to the other one.

The new nominee, a native of North Carolina, is 48 years old. He attended Staunton Military Academy and received his legal education at the University of North Carolina. He began his law career in Florida in 1913 and continued in residence at Tampa until his appointment to the Department of Justice in 1933.

He has made a special study of administrative law and was chairman of the Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure. He actively supervised the study made by the Department of Justice into the tax immunity problem.

Charged with assault on Fred W. Catlett, jr., 25, son of a member of Home Loan Bank Board, Harold D. Johnson, colored, 33, of 1443 T street northwest, pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial yesterday in Police Court.

Bail of $800 was set by Judge Hobart Newman. It was said young Catlett became involved in an argument with the colored doorman at the Westchester Apartment where he lives and that he was slashed on the shoulder by a knife. He was treated by a private physician.

Madden Charges 3 House Members Based Labor Act Amendments on 'Half-Truths'

By the United Press.

Chairman J. Warren Madden, of the National Labor Relations Board, charged yesterday that Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, outspoken critic of the Wagner act, wants to make "working people and their unions a caste of legal pariahs and untouchables."

He said charges against the board by Hoffman and Representatives Anderson (Democrat), Missouri, and Hartley (Republican), New Jersey, were based on "half-truths, misinformation or deliberate misrepresentations."

Testifying before the House Labor Committee, which is considering amendments to the Wagner act by all three Representatives, Madden denied they could produce a scintilla of proof the NLRB is prejudiced against the American Federation of Labor in favor of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. To support his statement, he produced charts purportedly showing that more decisions were handed down by the board in favor of the A. F. L. than its rival.

Hoffman, however, drew the most verbal fire from Madden.

The Michigan lawmaker, he said, wants to outlaw all working people "upon the slightest deviation from the requirements of the most reactionary or absurd village ordinance, or the terms of an injunction granted by any labor-baiting judge."

The Anderson and Hoffman bills, he said, express desires of the "extremists, the bitter-enders — those opposed to original enactment of the labor law."

Their enactment, he added, would permit employers to send spies and missionaries into workingmen's homes to malign union leaders, persuade the men and their families that employers will move their plants to other cities and destroy their livelihood.

Agitation for Wagner act amendments, he reiterated, springs from strife attending the civil war between the A. F. L. and C. I. O.

Anderson, nettled at the charges, said Madden had "distorted" his viewpoint.

"It is obvious," he said, "that Madden is either deliberately clouding the issue by misrepresentation, which I cannot believe, or he has once again been misled by untrustworthy advisers among the board's personnel."

He contended Madden evaded issues outlined by him, particularly those involving handling of complaints against the Ford Motor Co.

Madden admitted the NLRB has made occasional mistakes, but he contended that it has a "high batting average" of fairness, efficiency and accuracy.

Meantime, the Senate Education and Labor Committee, which also is considering proposed revision of the labor act, heard two representatives of the mining industry complain that union organizers had carried on a "reign of terror" in their plants.

The witnesses, D. D. Moffat, general manager of the Utah Copper Co., and Horace Moses, general manager of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Corporation, asked amendments which would protect workers from "coercion from any source."

Rep. Sumners Reported Better

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, who developed a respiratory infection following an operation about three weeks ago, was reported improving at George Washington University Hospital yesterday. Sumners, who is 64, is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee.

D. C. Carpenter Arrested On Idle Benefits Charge

Stewart G. Abell, 53-year-old carpenter, was arrested yesterday and charged with violating the District unemployment compensation act.

He was taken into custody by Policeman Edwin Grayson on a warrant sworn to by John A. Marshall, director, District Unemployment Compensation Board, accused of failure to pay unemployment fees for two employes. Abell, of 812 Fifth street northeast, was released under $300 bail pending a hearing.

2 Convicts Slain By Trusties After Escape in Storm

Little Rock, Ark., May 23 (AP).—Two colored convicts, who escaped with eight or ten others when wind demolished their stockade, were shot to death by trusty guards in a hand-to-hand fight near the Cummins State Prison Farm today.

The casualties came in the wake of a spring storm which killed four persons, injured scores and caused property damage of more than $1,000,000 elsewhere in the State late yesterday.

One life termer was recaptured without resistance. Another fugitive returned to camp voluntarily.

Girls' School Aides Attack Smith Regime

'Most Lax in 28 Years,' Assistant Testifies As Hearing Opens

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith yesterday heard her administration at the National Training School for Girls described as "the most lax in 28 years" by one witness at the public hearing on the reasons for her dismissal a year and a half ago.

She will take the stand—probably tomorrow—to uphold her administration at the school.

Miss Agnes C. Scanlon, assistant superintendent, who has been associated with the training school for 28 years, told Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen that Dr. Smith's administration was "the most lax" of any under which she had served.

High lights of the testimony were:

Allegations that inmates "threw plates of food against the wall" and in "many other ways" displayed lack of discipline.

Miss Mattie Owens, a teacher-matron, said she saw one inmate beat another's head against a cement floor.

Mrs. Marie Davis Gilbert, a nurse, said she treated girls with razor wounds and on one occasion treated an inmate who had "initials carved" on her.

Policeman Brings Laughter

Private Joseph A. Wheeler, of the Seventh Precinct, who has patrolled the training school territory for the past 14 years, brought laughter from the spectators when he recited the events of the "riot" at the school in June, 1937. He said he was called to put one girl in her room, and when he did this he was asked to place still another girl in her room and finally "one of the inmates smacked me on the head with a croquet mallet."

The present conditions at the school are "very good," Miss Scanlon stated. She said the girls now work "under a rigid schedule" and that the "bad" girls do not get the "best treatment" now.

It had been testified earlier that the unruly inmates were the ones who received "favored" treatment.

12 Have Babies

Dr. Marjorie Stuart, medical supervisor at the institution, said that 80 per cent of the inmates suffered from venereal diseases and that the girls came for treatments "only when they felt like it." She said she reported this condition to Dr. Smith, "but the same condition continued." She stated that during her service at the school 12 babies had been born to the inmates who became pregnant while on a "visit" away from the institution or while on an "escape."

posals we shall substitute the hostility of 5,000,000 Jews and their protestant sympathizers in the United States."

Wartime Prime Minister David Lloyd George blamed "mischievous activities fostered by Italians and Germans in recent years among a small section of Arabs" for driving Britain into an "act of national perfidy which will bring dishonor to the British name."

U. S. Protest Urged

By the Associated Press.

The acting chairman and the ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee joined yesterday in requesting the State Department to protest to Great Britain any change in the status of a Jewish national home in Palestine.

Acting Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, declared that such an action, if taken without agreement of the United States, would violate a U. S.-British convention of 1924 providing that Britain would not change the status of Palestine without United States assent.

The Bloom-Fish demand was announced by the American Zionist Bureau, which, at the same time, made public a letter from Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, declaring that "this fresh evidence of a cynical disregard for promises made, when fulfillment of those promises seems a temporary detriment, will insure further depletion of Britain's already depleted international prestige."

Vandenberg Wires Goldman

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, sent a telegram to Dr. Solomon Goldman, chairman of the National Emergency Committee for Palestine, saying he believes "more than ever in the Zionist home in Palestine . . . I emphatically favor every co-operation that America can give to the promised culmination of this promised Jewish homeland."

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, told the House Great Britain "has informed the world her promises mean nothing." Bender denounced what he described as the "betrayal of the Jews."

Roosevelt Damps Works Credit Idea

mittee for answers to this problem.

A sub-committee, he suggested, should be named to draw up a bill to create a system of capital credit banks. Meanwhile, he said, legislation might be drawn and passed immediately setting up the Public Works Finance Corporation and providing for insurance of loans to small business.

With regard to the latter proposal, Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., told the committee last week that small business did not need loans but "equity capital"—that is, money raised by sale of stocks.

Berle advocated variable or "selective" interest rates as a means of streamlining the Nation's long-term financing machinery. He insisted banks were not entitled to profits because they were simply mechanisms for creating currency—a privilege they derive from the Government.

Would Exclude Banks

He would restrict the profit system, therefore, by excluding banks. The large life insurance companies, which are the country's "most successful financial institutions," are operated, not for profit, but on the mutual principle, he recalled.

Berle emphasized the potential danger of inflation in expansion of Government debt to build public works. Although he did not believe there was any immediate danger, he urged strengthening of Federal Reserve System controls.

Some Rates "Almost Nil"

Added controls, he said, should consist of open market operations in Government securities on a large scale carried on by the Federal Reserve System with Treasury support, use of the capital credit banks in the control machinery by requiring them to shift interest and amortization rates up and down, and exercise by the reserve system of a new power to limit or suspend rediscount operations entirely.

The credit banks' which he felt might be set up on the mutual principle, should charge whatever interest rates were necessary to carry out their broad program of feeding out needed capital smoothly.

Under Berle's plan, interest rates charged for financing nonprofit enterprises, such as hospitals, should be "almost nil." Special rates, he suggested, might be permitted for low-cost housing.

Scores Commercial Banks

His proposal for financing (first through a Public Works Finance Corporation and later through credit banks) public construction projects contemplates taking these outlays out of the Federal budget and Government debt. They sho never have been in, he insisted.

The capital credit banks would have the privilege of rediscounting securities acquired by them with the Reserve banks. This would be true also of the Public Works Finance Corporation.

Although the banks might be set up as a division of existing commercial banks, Berle doubted practicability of this because commercial bankers are too devoted to classic economics. Separate banks might be created, he suggested, for various industries or according to a national or regional system.

Forecasts New Slump

They should be kept "rigidly nonpolitical," he declared. They would have the power of deciding what projects should be financed and what not. Berele warned that, to create wealth, only "useful" projects could be financed.

Saying capital markets had been closed in large part since 1931, Berle argued that the Government had to step in and use its credit to create wealth. This process, however, eventually would result in Government ownership of most productive plants, he said.

The next depression should come along within four or five years, at the outside, he predicted. Unless the financial system is put in shape, he declared, an "explosive situation" may develop.

Wife Declines To Testify Against Nichols in Slaying

Mrs. Clarence E. Nichols, of West Grove, Pa., yesterday refused to help the Government in its attempt to send her husband, who abandoned her and three children, to the electric chair for killing the woman he "married" here.

When Justice Laws explained to her that she was not compelled to testify against her husband, she hesitated, then said, "I don't think I want to testify if I am not compelled to."

Nichols, a 29-year-old plumber, went on trial Monday for killing Mrs. Viola Katherine Nichols, 32, a beauty shop operator, last September. Assistant District Attorney Caldwell placed in evidence Nichols' confession that he "saw red" when his second wife nagged him.

Cass to Be Welfare Chief if Congress Votes D.C. Revision

In event Congress approves the District supply bill for 1940 in its present form, Otto Cass, deputy administratod for the District WPA. will become superintendent of Public Assistance Services, succeeding Miss M. Alice Hill. The Commissioners approved his "premature" appointment but said his formal appointment would have to wait the approved supply bill.

The job, title of which has been changed from directo rof public assistance, pays $5,600, and is not subject to civil service requirements.

A graduate of the Heffley Institute, Cass served with the Marine Corps from 1917 to 1919. He later worked with the American Red Cros, Emergency Relief Division of the Board of the Public Welfare and was made deputy administrator on February 3, 1937.

Langley May Keep Air Force Center 2 Years

Training 17,000 Mechanics Upsets Transfer to Illinois

By the Associated Press.

The War Department may sidetrack for a couple of years its proposal to shift the directing center of the Army's mobile general headquarters air force to Scott Field, Ill., from Langley Field, Va.

Persons in authority attributed the possible delay to the more pressing necessity of training some 17,000 aviation mechanics to man new planes provided under the Administration's air corps expansion program.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary of War Johnson announced yesterday the award of a $974,324 contract for an experimental group of pursuit planes to the Seversky Aircraft Corporation, Farmingdale, N. Y.

Planes for Great Heights

Johnson did not give the number of planes called for by the order, but normally such orders are in groups of 13. He said improvements in streamlining would permit speeds well in excess of 350 miles an hour.

The Seversky planes will have flap air brakes and retractable landing gear and an inclosed cockpit with oxygen and other devices for operation at great heights.

Air corps recruits are to be given basic training at Scott Field, under arrangements already announced.

During the period of intensive training to expand the air corps from about 20,000 to 45,000 enlisted men, the G. H. Q. air force headquarters probably will remain at Langley Field.

Plans Tentative

Army officials stressed, however, that plans were tentative pending Congressional action on President Roosevelt's request for approximately $300,000,000 to treble Army air forces in the next two years. They said no orders had been issued to alter plans.

The transfer was ordered last summer and nearly $5,500,000 of public works and relief funds is being expended in new construction. It had been expected the shift would be made late this year.

Under the mechanics training plans announced this month, all Air Corps recruits will be given basic training at Scott Field in mathematics and other subjects. They then will be distributed among Army schools at Chanute Field, Ill., and Lowry Field, Colo., and seven selected civilian schools for more advanced work.

400 Candidates For Orders to Be Ordained Here

Beginning with services at 8 p. m. tomorrow and continuing daily at 7 a. m. from Friday until Tuesday, more than 400 candidates for the priesthood and other orders will be ordained at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

The group will include 78 priests, who will be ordained at 8 a. m. Tuesday by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore; 113 subdeacons and 200 for minor orders. Candidates for Tonsure, first preliminary order, will be ordained at the opening service.

Four candidates from two seminaries who are being sent to other points in the country for ordination are not included in the above groups. They are Thomas Garrett, C. S. A., of the Augustinian College, who will be ordained June 3 at Santiago, Calif., his home town; Fred Bergmann, C. S. C.; Jerome Lawyer, C. S. C., and Edmund Dampers, C. S. C., who will be ordained June 24 at Notre Dame by Bishop John Noll, C. S. C. The latter three will be assigned to mission work in India.

House Fails to Ask Cut in Farm Bill

Senate on most of the unbudgeted increase.

The $1,218,000,000 Senate farm bill, largest agriculture appropriation in history, boosts farm outlays $374,000,000 above the President's budget, and Treasury officials have expressed fear it will closely "crowd" the $45,000,000,000 legal debt limit in the next fiscal year.

Mostly for Grants, Loans

Besides the $225,000,000 to pay farmers "parity" (1909-1914 farm purchasing power), the Senate measure provides another unbudgeted $113,000,000 for export subsidies and domestic surplus removal and doubles the $25,000,000 House tenant farmer appropriation. Approximately $1,000,000,000 of the $1,218,000,000 outlay would go for farm benefit payments, direct grants and loans.

Lone Democrat to take the floor against the increases, Woodrum, warned members they were voting funds over the President's "specific protest" and urged the House to instruct conferees against the Senate parity prices, surplus removal and farm tenant increases. He called the special rule dispatching the Senate bill to conference "unusual" and a "gag."

Cannon Jibes at Woodrum

Cannon in turn jibed at Woodrum on his "return to the fold" in supporting the President's farm bill stand yesterday after previously opposing White House WPA estimates.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, led the minority attack on the Senate outlays, and declared there was "not a chance" House conferees, unless bound, would materially whittle the Senate bill.

Representative Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, third-party Presidential candidate in the last campaign, insisted Senate increases were not enough. He declared $7,500,000,000 was needed to pay farmers "parity" and urged the House to enact cost of production legislation.

The Hilside (Md.) Citizens Association will install officers at 8 o'clock tonight at Bradbury Heights School. All were re-elected in recognition of their successful fight against a bill to incorporate the township, which Gov. O'Conor pigeonholed after it had been passed by the Legislature.

The officers are Emil Leonard, president; W. J. Posey, Fred S. Kirk, Franklin Gray, Charles Knight, J. W. Foust and James Foley, vice presidents; Evelyn Hall, secretary, and the Rev. F. C. Martin, treasurer.

Husband Kills D. C. Wife, Self on Eve of Divorce

Bradford, Pa., May 23 (AP).—Gleason Peters, 45, night-club operator, shot and killed his estranged wife and himself in a downtown hotel early tonight, Deputy Coroner George P. Lull reported.

Dr. Lull said the wife, Mrs. Mabel Richards Peters, had arrived earlier today from her parents' home in Washington, for her divorce suit, scheduled to be heard tomorrow.

Peters arranged a conference in his wife's room. Hearing of a commotion, Robert Matthews, clerk in the hotel, said he went to investigate and was told by Peters:

"Don't come in here or I'll plug you!"

Matthews called police and Chief Edwards arrived a few seconds after three shots were heard.

Both husband and wife had been shot through the head.

U. S. Begins Inquiry Over Lollipop Sticks

New York, May 23 (AP).—A Federal grand jury began an investigation today into the $5,000,000-dollar-a-year business that makes those little wooden sticks on lollipops and ice cream bars.

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, said the inquiry would concern reports of price fixing intended to stifle competition.

It's the pattern—no mistaking that—and you'll find plenty of admiring glances following wherever you travel.
But if attention had been all we were after, we might have got merely that with a lot less pains than we took.
What we were shooting for was something a heap more important than attention: a picture that does you justice—and mister, look how gloriously we hit the bull's-eye!
You try out the driver's seat—it fits. You take hold of the wheel—it seems molded to your hand. There's the gas treadle, right where it should be . . .
So you ease down on the gas—and pronto, you've got rhythm! You fingertip the wheel—presto! there's control!
You wing down the straightaway, cruise around curves, swoop up the hill. Eagerly, instantly, amiably, your car does what you want—it's almost a part of you, your wish is its action!
So, you happily discover, here's where you belong!
It isn't the big and powerful wallop in that big Dynaflash straight-eight alone. It isn't only the level skimming comfort of soft-coiled BuiCoil Springing. It isn't simply the visibility—though those extra 412 square inches come in mighty handy.
It's the feel of this great car you'll go for, the way you feel at home!
Now such a car is worth plenty. But this Buick actually costs less than a year ago, less than you think—less than some sixes.
Surely, that leaves nothing else to settle except when you can get delivery. Why not see your Buick dealer and get the answer?

Half-Million Expected to See Royalty Here

1,000 Fighting Men From Ft. Meyer to Escort the Party

A crowd of half a million, largest in the Capital's history, will line the parade route two weeks from tomorrow, when Washington welcomes King George and Queen Elizabeth.

That was the estimate given yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who has 30 years experience in sizing up crowds and bears heavy responsibility for handling the record-breaker expected June 8.

Meanwhile the show the crowds are coming to see—the royal progress from Union Station to the White House—has been doubled in duration and color. More than 1,000 fighting men from Fort Myer, The Post learned yesterday, will join Their Majesties escort and ride the entire length of the parade route.

A small detachment of cavalry accompanied the motorcade for Gen. Somoza of Nicaragua from Union Station past the Capitol to the intersection of Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues, where they dropped out of line.

Original Plans Changed

Original plans for the reception to the British sovereign provided only for a tank escort and plane convoy overhead. All other troops were to be drawn up at Union Station Plaza or stationed along the parade route.

Enlisted men and noncoms at Fort Myer were still unaware of their new orders yesterday, but officers have received word that the entire garrison, except for a skeleton detail to guard the reservation, will take part in the parade.

With horses and caissons of the Third Cavalry and Sixteenth Field Artillery bringing up the rear of the royal procession, the parade now is expected to require at least 20 minutes to pass any given point.

Hotels Deluged With Orders

Hotels fronting on Pennsylvania avenue have been deluged with orders for reservations June 8. Prices do not yet approach British coronation levels—when broad windows on Piccadilly or Regent street rented for as much as $150 apiece—but one local hotel is getting $40 for corner suites commanding a sweeping view of the Avenue.

The Willard, accepting no parade reservations for less than two days, reports almost all Pennsylvania avenue rooms spoken for, with a brisk demand for 100 $3.30 seats to be installed in boxes at the south entrance.

At the Raleigh room prices start at $9, and individual seats in the Raleigh Room at $5. Numerous requests for rooms have been received from the Middle West, the management said.

Government Employes in Luck

In Government and private office buildings along the line of march executives already are wondering how many people can lean out of one window. At the Commerce Department it was stated that employes who regularly work in rooms overlooking Pennsylvania avenue will have first call on window space. Federal Trade Commission officials have not yet made arrangements for admission to the balcony atop the building, with its unrivaled view of the Capitol Hill-Station Plaza area, but admitted, "it's something to think about." In another Federal Triangle structure an aide thanked The Post "for reminding me of the problem."

Sidewalks along the royal route will give approximately 150,000 spectators a good view, Maj. Brown estimated. At least 300,000 more persons, he believes, will pack the park areas near the Union Station and Capitol and side streets feeding into Pennsylvania avenue, particularly those sloping from the north. This second class of spectators will catch at least a glimpse of the parade, hear the music "and get in on the general excitement," the superintendent pointed out.

Million Expected in Town

Police expect more than a million people in town June 8.

The largest crowd in District history gathered in March, 1933, when more than 400,000 saw Franklin Roosevelt ride to his inauguration. Half that number stood in the rain four years later to see the President begin his second term. Lindbergh was greeted by 150,000 when he came to the Capital 12 years ago, and the same number jammed Pennsylvania avenue in spontaneous celebration of the Armistice, November 11, 1918.

Mount Vernon will be closed to the general public June 9 until 2:30 p. m., when the royal party concludes its visit, the Mount Vernon Ladies Association announced yesterday. Officers of the association said they felt the appearance of the King and Queen would attract so many visitors as to endanger the property.

London, May 23 (AP).—Four members of the crew of a royal air force bomber were killed and a fifth injured seriously when the plane crashed today near Newark, England.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

America Held Franco's Best Imperial Hope

Revolution Achieved, Expansion Reported His Next Purpose

By Manuel Chaves Nogales.

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

Paris, May 23.—The victory procession of May 19 through the streets of Madrid has brought to the foreground of international preoccupation a new fact which must be regarded even if only provisionally as the immediate consequence of the Spanish civil war—namely, the Spanish empire.

To Gen. Franco's mind this spectacular procession was not merely to signify the end of a conflict between brothers and the beginning of that age of peace so urgently required by Spain. He deliberately invested it with an openly militarist aspect by representing it as the starting point of a new adventure—entitled the Spanish empire.

According to his recent declarations and his authorized instruments of publicity, the essential objects of the new Spanish regime are twofold:

A national syndicalist revolution.

The restoration of the Spanish empire.

The national syndicalist revolution advocated by the minister of the interior, Senor Serrano Suner (Franco's brother-in-law) exists in fact. It is no more than the Spanish version of German national socialism.

As for the restoration of the Spanish empire of the sixteenth century, this is an idea which is discussed by many good Spanish patriots.

For 40 years—that is, since the war with the United States and the loss of the Spanish colonies—it has been an idea shared by all honest and intelligent Spaniards that any attempt at national reconstruction should be based upon the admission of Spain's present inferiority. This intellectual discipline, imposed by a series of national catastrophies due to the disproportion that long had existed between Spain's real strength and the amplitude of her enterprises, is actually the cause of the division between the two Spanish parties. Against this principle of the true limits of Spain, Franco, obsessed with the dawning imperialism of the totalitarian countries, has resuscitated the idea of this empire—which is merely a will to power devoid of any real basis.

The only resource left to Spanish imperialism is to exercise its influence in the Spanish-speaking world in the hope of some day assuming a kind of spiritual mandate over the 16 American republics of Spanish origin.

On the basis of the Spanish racial conception it is proposed to use South American nationalisms as an instrument to combat the democratic powers of Europe and, above all, the great North American democracy. Franco to this end delegates his agents to the Spanish-American republics, where almost always are organized sections of falangists who obtain what the Germans could not—the nazification of the Spanish-American peoples and the formation on the new continent of a bloc hostile to the democracies and later capable of counterbalancing the liberal policy of the United States of America.

Queen Mother Hurt as Her Car Overturns

Trapped After Crash With Truck; Condition Called Satisfactory

By the Associated Press.

London, May 23.—Britain's beloved Queen Mary suffered "bruising and shock" today when her automobile overturned in a collision with a two-ton truck in a London suburb, three days before her seventy-second birthday.

The widow of George V and mother of reigning George VI, Queen Mary was taken to her home at Marlborough House, and the royal physicians pronounced her condition "satisfactory." This bulletin was issued tonight at Marlborough House:

"Her Majesty Queen Mary is suffering from bruising and shock as the result of an accident this afternoon in which Her Majesty's car was overturned.

Considerable Bruising

"Though the bruising is considerable and will need some days' complete rest, Her Majesty's general condition is this evening satisfactory."

The bulletin was signed by Sir Stanley Hewett and Lord Dawson of Penn. The latter attended King George V and is probably England's most noted physician.

The royal car was badly damaged when the front of the truck crashed into a rear wheel. No one in the truck was injured.

Lady Constance Milnes-Gaskell, lady in waiting, and Lord Claude Hamilton, comptroller and treasurer in the Queen's household, riding with Queen Mary, suffered minor bruises. Oscar Humphrey, veteran royal family chauffeur, was said to be suffering from shock.

Trapped in Car

Trapped in the royal limousine, the Queen was helped out by Percy Hullis, a house painter. He said:

"On hearing the crash, I rushed to the overturned car and to my surprise I found Queen Mary lying inside, accompanied by a man and woman. . . . I called to one of my men to bring a pair of steps (a ladder).

"The lady in waiting (Lady Constance) was pinned in the back by one of the seat cushions and Queen Mary was lying across the feet of the man. When we helped Queen Mary to climb out, she passed some joking remark which I cannot remember. We had to hammer the window to open it to put the steps inside."

The Queen was carried to a nearby house, where she sipped a cup of tea and remained 15 minutes while arrangements were made for physicians to attend her at Marlborough House.

League Orders Commissioner Back to Danzig

Geneva, May 23 (U.P.).—The League of Nations today gave Poland a strong bargaining point in her dispute with Germany when the tripower league committee for Danzig directed Dr. Karl Burckhardt to return to his post as high commissioner for the Free City.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler had sought to compel the League's withdrawal from the Free City. Burckhardt returned to Geneva last February to "report" on the Nazi-Polish dispute. Not until today were any steps taken to return him to his post.

It was argued that Poland, with Burckhardt back in Danzig, would be able to offer withdrawal of League of Nations control over the Free City if Hitler would agree to a joint Polish-German proctectorate over the Free City.

The occasion was the arrival of the royal train at Port Arthur, a manufacturing and grain storage city on the Thunderbay, at Lake Superior.

Here, after traveling through a vast and silent country all day, the King and Queen were greeted by a 21-gun royal salute and the familiar spectacle of a brilliantly uniformed guard of honor.

They drove through streets lined solidly with men, women and children. Several thousand were Americans who had come from Duluth on the other side of Lake Superior. The Duluth Symphony Orchestra came up to lead 6,000 children in singing "God Save the King."

From Port Arthur the King and Queen, trailed by their ladies and gentlemen in waiting, motored 12 miles to Fort William, a bustling port city of 25,000, which grew out of a trading post established by Duluth toward the close of the seventeenth century.

There is an intense rivalry between Port Arthur and Fort William, but today it was forgotten in the joy of Their Majesties.

At Fort William the King and Queen slowed down at the McIntyre River to view an Indian camp, with tepees, camp fires and all the other primitive trappings. Several of the braves were paddling birch-bark canoes.

Leaving Fort William late today, the royal train headed for Winnipeg and the prairie country.

One of the first stops this morning was White River, Ontario, the "coldest spot in Canada." Sure enough, White River greeted Their Majesties with a freezing temperature and a flurry of snow, which fell on the strangest assemblage the royal couple had seen thus far—Indians with their papoose-bearing squaws, trappers and prospectors, many of whom had shaved for the first time in weeks.

No Top Hats

A 25-piece band, imported from Chapleau, 130 miles away, played "God Save the King," and for the first time the sovereigns looked out to see a cheering throng in which there was not a single top hat.

The next stop, at Schreiber, Ontario, was short but full of interest for the British Sovereigns. Indians, prospectors, trappers, and railroadmen swelled the community's population for the day to 1,000. Official greeter was R. E. V. Sheehan, a railway fireman.

Here the King and Queen mingled with the citizens, lauded the town's decorations and natural scenic attractions.

Chat With Citizens

The citizenry watched with delight as the Queen played with 2-year-old Annie Stimson and chatted with her mother. The Queen herself was delighted to learn that Annie had been born on Coronation Day. Little Annie, however, was greatly attracted to the Queen's bouquet of roses, which had been presented to her by the town's officials.

The King, meanwhile, paid a personal tribute to Mrs. M. A. Riley, who had lost three sons in the World War.

It was on reaching Heron Bay that the King and Queen caught their first glimpse of Lake Superior, largest body of fresh water in the world, today a glorious blue, fringed by evergreen trees.

Notwithstanding the sparsely-settled nature of the country through which Their Majesties traveled today, they never went for long without being reminded that the sun never sets on the flag of Great Britain.

The blue and silver royal special would travel for miles and miles through great timber lands and then suddenly would come a clearing and Their Majesties could see the Union Jack fluttering from a trapper's cabin or it might be flying from a logging camp or from one of the Hudson Bay Co.'s trading posts.

Royal Garden Party Guest List Closed, Lady Lindsay Declares

"My head is bloody but unbowed."

With those six words Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador to the United States, described the hulaballoo of criticism that arose over 1,300-odd invitations to "representative Americans" for the garden party to be given King George and Queen Elizabeth at the British Embassy June 8.

She denied that 500 names had been added to the original guest list in wake of pressure by hundreds of officials, legislators, social registerites, and just plain folks who thought they'd like to or ought to be invited to the party. Although Lady Lindsay revealed but a partial guest list, she insisted that it was closed.

Invitation recipients include John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, and William Green, A. F. of L. head; J. P. Morgan and Henry Ford, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Gen. Pershing, Episcopal Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, and the papal delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, who lives across the street from the embassy; Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York and Grover Whalen, head of the World's Fair, which Their Majesties will visit two days after the party.

Hoovers Unable to Attend

Former President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover have been invited but are unable to come, Lady Lindsay said. She wasn't sure about it, but she thought that Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, was an invitee.

Also on the list were "some member of the duPont family, Vincent Astor, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of U. S. Steel; John D. Rockefeller, jr., Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Miss Mabel Boardman, Red Cross secretary; Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., D. A. R. president-general.

Lady Lindsay acknowledged that she had made a lone exception to her closed invitation list by hurriedly adding members of the Roosevelt family who will be in Washington for the royal visit. Those expected are the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and John Roosevelt.

Mrs. Longworth Invited

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of President "Teddy" Roosevelt and a close friend of Lady Lindsay, has received a bid, and another went to Mrs. Harry O. King, the former Representative Isabella Greenway, another friend.

Also remembered were widows of former Presidents, including Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Thomas Jex Preston, widow of President Cleveland, and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, who married the late Chief Executive after he left the White House.

James Gerard, who served as special ambassador to the coronation of King George VI, is on the guest list together with all living former envoys to the Court of St. James's—former Vice President Charles G. Dawes, Alansan B. Houghton, John W. Davis—and widows of former ambassadors to the court

The "representative Americans" selected to meet the British sovereigns included a sizable layer from the top ranks of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps; members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and House Foreign Affairs Committee; majority and minority leaders of both Houses, and chairmen of the standing Congressional committees; Govs. O'Conor of Maryland and Price of Virginia.

Lady Lindsay's press conference yesterday cleared up a major moot point when she explained that all invitations to men included their wives, if the latter were inadvertently omitted in the requests. A second question remained unanswered, as she couldn't remember whether or not Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, the Duchess of Windsor's "Aunt Bessie," had been invited. Lady Lindsay, however, was quick to add that "no guests were chosen because of their relatives."

The hostess-to-be said she found the public's interest in the garden party "most gratifying," as it proves that many Americans are eager to see Their Majesties. And as to the stir over the invitations, Lady Lindsay added, any English woman would be as glad as she that so many people wanted to attend.

Planes Rush D. C. Experts to Begin Rescue of 59 success of the first two methods of saving the crew of the vessel.

Under the first, divers would close the valve which is supposed to have stuck or was left open and through which it is believed part of the submarine was flooded. Compressed air from the Falcon would then blow out Squalus's ballast tanks. Experts said that if but one compartment is flooded, the air filled tanks would then raise the craft. Earlier reports indicated this was so.

Later advices, however, convinced naval officials that the whole after part of the vessel probably was flooded, including the after torpedo room, both engine rooms and the crew's quarters.

These reports also showed the submarine to be resting on the bottom at a 15 degree angle, and officials said that this would make it difficult for divers to fit the diving bell over the escape hatches, the second method of rescue considered.

"Lung" Method Most Likely

This leaves the "Momsen lung" as the most likely method to be used, and officials said it had never been attempted below 206 feet. However, there is no reason why it should not operate successfully at lower depths, it was said.

A compartment of the submarine would be flooded under this method, with the crew inside. Air pressure would keep the water about a foot below the ceiling. Each member of the crew would then don the "lung" which consists of an oxygen-filled bag, a tube and a nose and mouth pice. The hatch would be opened and a line with a buoy attached allowed to float up to the surface.

Singly, then, each man would duck below the surface of the water in the chamber into the "skirt" of the escape hatch and move hand over hand up the line.

The danger of this method, officials say, is that some of the crew may become panicky, forget their training and let go. Bobbing to the surface, they would be dead when they arrive from the 240-foot depth, it was said. If they follow instructions, however, and proceed slowly, stopping every few fathoms for a 2 to 3 minute rest, they should be in good condition after a stay in the Falcon's decompression chamber, officers declare.

The difficulty with the fourth method is its slowness. The pontoons and derrick lighter necessary in raising the craft will not arrive at the scene until tomorrow afternoon. Depending on the weather, it would then take at least 24 hours to raise the submarine by this means.

White officials hope it will not be necessary to take this means to bring out the men, they declare that emergency oxygen and rations are installed in each compartment to keep the crew alive for perhaps three days or longer.

Naval officials said that first knowledge of disaster came when the Squalus' sister ship, the Scalpin, noticed it failed to arise at the proper time after a scheduled dive. A little later, a smoke bomb shot into the air, fired by a submerged gun on the Squalus. It arose some 80 feet above the water and held up a parachute, slowly descended, giving off dense red smoke.

Next, one of the submarine's two "marker buoys" rose to the surface. This carries a telephone instrument, an automatic light and an automatic radio signal, and the laconic inscription "Submarine Sunk Here." It is attached to the submarine by a telephone wire. Communication was established for a time between the Sculpin and Lieut. Oliver F. Naquin, the Squalus' commander, officials said, but the line was carried away by a rough sea.

By means of secret underwater sound devices, which officials would not describe, communication was re-established with the sunken submarine and has been continued.

The latest type submarines like the Squalus are equipped with two sets of emergency valves on their decks, officers said. Compressed air pipes can be attached to one set, so that its ballast tanks can be blown out from the surface rescue vessel, while through the others, fresh air can be pumped into compartments in which men are gathered. These also can be used to convey soup to the crew.

Food has been conveyed to submerged crews in this manner in prior disasters, but because of the presence of emergency rations in each compartment of the vessel, officials believed that it will be unnecessary, should the submarine's galley and storeroom be flooded or cut from the men.

An officer who has been long in the submarine service graphically described last night what must have occurred aboard the Squalus when she failed to arise.

"The alarm would be sounded," he declared, "and every officer and man would run to his station. Then under the direction of the commanding officer everything would be made fast. Doors would be closed, electrical emergency equipment operated to close valves, and each compartment completely sealed.

"Then the marker buoys would be released and a smoke bomb fired. Efforts would be continued to raise the vessel. When communication is established with a rescue vessel on the surface, the commander confers with those above as to the best method to follow. If the ballast tanks and not more than one compartment is flooded, the vessel may be raised by blowing out the former.

"If this does not work, then the submarine rescue chamber or the 'lungs' must be used. In the former case, the rescue party does most of the work. The chamber or bell is lowered and fastened over a hatch and the men are taken out without flooding the chamber. Should it be necessary to use the 'lungs,' the crew will be ordered in either the forward or aft torpedo room, and the chamber flooded.

"The water will fill the room up to within a foot of the ceiling, the air pressure preventing it from filling entirely. The escape hatch on the deck will then be opened and a buoy with a line attached allowed to float to the surface. Each man will put on his 'lung,' filled with oxygen from reserve flasks, and in turn, duck down and enter the "skirt" of the escape hatch. He must then force himself to go slowly up the line to the surface, stopping at intervals. If he lets go, he will bob right up to the surface, and at that depth, would be dead when he reached it."

Men in Submarine's Stern Fail to Answer Signals

two submarines together. It was necessary to grapple for the Squalus in order to get a line aboard on which divers could descend.

Earlier reports from high officials had indicated the entire crew was still breathing nearly 12 hours after the accident, but Capt. H. R. Greenlee, industrial manager of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, said tonight the last direct word from Lieut. O. F. Naquin, in command of the Squalus, had given a clew that some might have been trapped when the after compartments were flooded.

Returning from the Navy tug Wandank, anchored above the sunken undersea craft, Capt. Greenlee quoted Naquin as saying, just before telephone communications with the Squalus were broken, that he had tried without success to communicate with the stern compartments. He reasoned Naquin would not have made this move if all of the 59 aboard were safe in the forward compartments.

Lieut. Naquin, speaking shortly after noon on a telephone line sent up from the Squalus by buoy, recommended to his superiors that no immediate effort be made to bring the trapped men to the surface individually by means of the new escape "lung."

The best course, he suggested, would be for a diver to come down from the surface and attempt to close the open air induction valve. An air hose then could be attached and the flooded compartments pumped out.

Soon after the Squalus' commander gave this advice the telephone connection broke.

No immediate diving operations were possible due to the necessity of definitely locating the Squalus again after the breaking of the line first sent up from the sunken craft.

Three Others on Board

Due to the test nature of the cruise on which the Squalus met her accident three men were on board in addition to the 5 regular officers and 51 crew members. Two were civilian employes of the Navy Department and one was a contractor's representative.

At the scene, besides the Sculpin and Wandank, were the Coast Guard boats Harriet E. Lane and Thetis, and a 75-foot patrol boat. Converging on the scene were the tug Levana, the Falcon, the destroyer Semmes and the new 10,000-ton cruiser Brooklyn.

Before the cruiser sailed, two Coast Guard seaplanes took off to pick up the sub's crew should they pop out of the depths in emergency escape equipment.

"Thick" weather delayed the Brooklyn, causing Capt. W. W. Smith to estimate the cruiser would not arrive at the scene until noon tomorrow. Poor visibility held the Brooklyn's speed to about 20 knots, 13 under its capacity.

Besides diving equipment, the cruiser was outfitted with hospital facilities and was expected to be rescue headquarters.

The Navy tug Sagamore was ready at New York to tow barges, nine 60-ton pontoons and a 90-ton derrick lighter to the scene, if needed. The tug, however, could not reach Portsmouth before late Thursday and officers said the pontoon operation would take at least a day.

Aboard the Falcon was all of the Navy's latest rescue equipment, including a diving bell that could be let down to the sunken ship to bring up three or four men at a time.

The Squalus lay on the ocean floor for hours yesterday before its plight was discovered.

She went out on a routine "dive" and failed to come up after an hour, usually a dive limit under trial circumstances.

Admiral Cole ordered the Sculpin to try and make contact with the submerged ship and at 12:15 p. m. the first contact was made after the Sculpin discovered a red smoke bomb signal on the surface of the water, indicating the Squalus was in distress.

The Sculpin located the bobbing "bomb," and telephone contact was established between the two "tin fish." A brief story was given of an induction valve, left open during a deep dive, coupled with a report that the crew's quarters, aft engine room and aft torpedo room were flooded.

As word of a possible disaster—another undersea accident not many miles from the spot off Provincetown where the submarine S-4 went down in 1927 with the loss of 40 lives—the office of Admiral Cole issued the following statement:

"I think they have a pretty good chance. We don't know just how much water got in but the ship is capable of being shut off in four or five water-tight compartments and it is possible, with oxygen tanks on board, for them to keep going for a week."

Ship 8 Months Old

The Squalus is 290 feet long, with a beam of 26 feet, and is rated in size at 1,450 tons. Launched last September 15, the craft has been on routine operations in this area preparatory to formal trials at sea on June 13. This accounted for the outside observers who were on board, boosting the size of the usual crew.

Officers at the Navy Yard here offered various guesses as to the accident which held the Squalus at the bottom. The consensus was that a high induction air valve—a pipe giving air to the engine or after part of the ship when the craft was on the surface—had not been closed or had broken open during the dive.

Navy officers said that under ordinary circumstances an alarm system would be set off if such a valve remained open when the craft was preparing for a dive, and some hazarded the opinion that the alarm system might have broken down.

One ranking officer said the brief information received from the Squalus indicated the sea had started to flow in from the high induction valve, pouring into the stern of the ship. He said the evidence at hand would indicate those in the stern might have rushed forward without closing the watertight doors until two or three watertight doors had been passed, thus allowing the entire after part of the craft to be flooded.

Has Emergency Supplies

Worried naval men, scanning the sea from this point, were not even sure that the trapped men had lights with which to cheer their ordeal—but they said there was enough food and drinking water aboard the Squalus to last the men several days.

Theorizing on what might be happening aboard, the mariners ashore said the "Navy way" would be for the entombed officers and men "to lie perfectly still" so as to husband their precious store of oxygen.

It is possible, they said, that the men have free movement of half the craft, although it was the general impression officers would give orders for each man to pick a spot and stay there.

Besides full regular rations aboard, the Squalus is equipped with emergency supplies of canned beef, canned beans and soda crackers, all spread about in airtight compartments throughout the submarine.

There is plenty of drinking water in special tanks placed at vantage points throughout, while extra bedding always is distributed in various compartments. Often, the men ashore said, the submarine men sleep close to their posts.

Four Similar Disasters

Four times previously in American history, disaster has struck the Navy's submarine fleet, taking a total of 113 lives.

The first occurred in Honolulu in 1915, when the F-4 sank with 21 aboard. Two years later, a sister ship, the F-1, went down in San Diego harbor, with a loss of 19. Thirty-three lives were lost in 1925, when a collision sent the S-51 to the bottom off Block Island, R. I.

Worst of the disasters occurred a week before Christmas in 1927, when the Coast Guard cutter Paulding struck the S-4 off Provincetown, Mass. Rescuers fought to reach the craft, sunk in 100 feet of water, and although signs of life were heard at first, all 40 members of the crew were dead when workers reached the torpedo room with oxygen.

Berlin Welcomes Japanese Offer

Berlin, May 23 (AP).—Official Germany tonight welcomed Japan's expressed desire to broaden the "basis for co-operation" with Germany and Italy, but Nazi spokesmen were wary in discussing how far the Reich was willing to go toward collaboration in a concrete way.

It is asserted in Berlin that Germany has been none too keen for too close an affiliation with Japan. A dream of possible reconciliation with Soviet Russia would be dashed by a German-Japanese military alliance.

Have You Forgotten What an Automobile is for?

YOU SEE IT HAPPEN any Saturday or Sunday . . . on almost every road.

There's a gay toot-toot behind you . . . a rush of wind . . . a flash of waving hands.

And it's another new Nash! Packed with people, picnic baskets, and fishing rods . . . and there's a quiver of excitement in the air.

If yours is a wistful eye . . . if it makes you feel a little bit old to see it—don't blame yourself. You've just forgotten what an automobile is for.

But a new Nash will tell you! It won't let you dawdle over the Sunday papers. Just looking at its rakish lines pulls you right out of the house.

You get in the front seat—and you're lost. For you want to try that new gear-shift* again . . . you want to see if this time you can hear the engine running.

And suddenly you hear the click of the Fourth Speed Forward*, and you're spirited out of town . . . alone on an open road, with the rest of the pack far behind you.

So you turn a little dial and head for rough country just for the fun of feeling again how you sweep over bumps the other cars are bobbing over . . . just to see how the "Weather Eye"* makes dusty air pure.

Likely as not, you'll end up in some lovely spot you haven't seen for years. Stay if you want, there's even a convertible bed in your Nash.

But it doesn't make much difference where you go—in a Nash. Even bringing home the kids from school can be a privilege the whole family will fight for!

Drive a Nash for 15 minutes, and we predict it will become so much a part of you that you'll never want to give it up.

That makes it yours—for hundreds of dollars less than you imagine. Ten models are priced right next to the lowest . . . models that won the cup for economy in their price class in the 1939 Gilmore-Yosemite Run, with 21.25 miles to the gallon! And heaven only knows—a Nash never gives up!

A new Nash is waiting for you now. The engine is running. Bring down the family and go for a glorious afternoon.

It's that new NASH

Three Stars Shine in Twentieth Century's 'Rose'

Power, Faye and Jolson Are in Top Form; Warners Run Ahead of Their Schedule; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

MORE NOSTALGIA. In producing "Rose of Washington Square," Darryl F. Zanuck, Poo-Bah of the Twentieth Century-Fox lot, has done approximately what he contrived so skillfully in "Alexander's Ragtime Band." He has gone back to the prohibition era for his story and his songs and, with the two in combination, has fashioned another film play that will tug at the pleasantest memories of a great many "old-timers."

BELL

I say Darryl Zanuck has done all this, whereas, being in charge of production, probably all he did was scribble a few "Okays" on various papers laid on his desk. He is the fellow, nevertheless, to be praised or blamed for what came out of his latest surrender to reminiscent brooding. As a matter of fact, the story on which "Rose of Washington Square" is based was written by John Larkin and Jerry Horwin and was adapted to the screen by Co-producer Nunnally Johnson. Gregory Ratoff did the directing and a pretty nice job of directing he did.

The dramatic narrative—if that is what it is—embodied in "Rose of Washington Square" falls into a familiar and well-worn groove. It is the fable of the struggling vaudeville team, striving for the big time, that is broken up and tossed about in a wide variety of emotional, comic and purely theatrical sequences. Both eventually became stars—the boy on the sheer merit of his singing; the girl through her own ability and the shady aid of a "city slicker" with whom she has fallen completely in love. This, I repeat, is not an entirely new idea to the screen. It is one that is worked out here, however, with rather more than ordinary shrewdness. There are overtones of actuality in this picture which, I believe, already have caused Twentieth Century-Fox some concern.

Certainly the piece could hardly have been better done than it is. There are three performances in the film, any one of which would suffice to "put it over," as the saying goes. Alice Faye, both as singer and actress, is better in this subject than she was in "Alexander's Ragtime Band;" Tyrone Power, as the gambler-crook-sweetheart, does perhaps the most thoroughly convincing piece of work he ever has brought to the screen. Mr. Power gets down to earth in this one and distinguishes his role by a degree of realism and conviction he has not always before been able to command. And then there is Al Jolson.

Jolson Again on Top

Jolson may be a little heavier about the jowls and his voice may have lost just a shade of its vibrance, but the "world's greatest entertainer" still has what it takes. He resurrects and rejuvenates the old Winter Garden days by singing practically all of the songs that made him famous when his career was in its heyday. And he sings them just as well as he ever did—which is better than anybody else possibly could. There always was and probably always will be something dynamic about this former Washington lad that has it in its power to knock an audience right out of its collective chair. Jolson is still Jolson.

There are, of course, many others in the cast of "Rose of Washington Square" who contribute items that you will want to enjoy when it follows "The Hardys Ride High" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. That would be June 1, according to the present dope sheets.

"Rose of Washington Square," incidentally, is the picture that inspired a bit of asperity between Fannie Brice and Twentieth Century-Fox. Miss Brice feels that into the substance of the story has been written a great deal that pertains to her romance with Nicky Arnstein. On the main title of the picture, as almost goes without saying, is that conventional legend, saying, in effect, that all characters and events depicted in the film are purely fictional and any relation they may have to living characters is coincidental. That is a matter with which this department, happily, has no concern. It is being fought out, I believe, between Miss Brice's agent and Joseph N. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, before Miss Brice resorts to the courts for the recovery of the two or three hundred thousand dollars she feels is due her for this alleged infringement upon her private life. "Rose of Washington Square" still is a good picture, court proceedings or no court proceedings.

According to word from Burbank, the Warner Bros. studios are 5½ months ahead of release dates on their current production schedule. This is believed to be a record in the industry. There are 22 major features either completed or in the cutting room.

Among the productions to be released within the next few months are "Juarez," costarring Paul Muni and Bette Davis—to be previewed by an invited audience in the Department of the Interior Auditorium tonight; "Each Dawn I Die," costarring James Cagney and George Raft, a recent visitor on the Union Pacific Special; "The Kid From Kokomo," with Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris, Joan Blondell and May Robson; "A Family Affair," with last year's cast of "Four Daughters;" "The Old Maid," starring Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, and "Give Me a Child," with Geraldine Fitzgerald, Gladys George and Jeffrey Lynn.

An imposing list of new films also are before the cameras, among them "Elizabeth and Essex," costarring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn; "Dust Be My Destiny," with John Garfield, Margot Stevenson and Alan Hale; "The Hobby Family," Henry O'Neill and Irene Rich; "Not Wanted," "Dead or Alive," "Torchy Blane" and "Nancy Drew and the Hidden Staircase."

There are ten features in preparation that hold high promise of maintaining a high level of excellence. One of them, "On Your Toes," will bring Zorina, recently seen at the National in "I Married an Angel," back to the screen, this time in association with Eddie Albert.

A reasonably pretty postage card from Paris, showing Mr. J. Raymond Bell, of the Loew publicity forces, lugging the Eiffel Tower on his shoulder, has this to say: "i.i. No Relation: Same guy, same city, same tower, but new pose—same fun, too! The De Tittas send reels of devotion. Regards (Signed) RAY." The other Mr. Bell, at the moment, is enjoying a prize-award trip to Paris for one of his promotion campaigns—the lucky this-and-that.

'Arms and Man' Well Played by Civic Group

Season's Last Drama To Run at Wardman Pk. Through Saturday

"ARMS AND THE MAN." The Washington Civic Theater presents the play in three acts, by George Bernard Shaw. Production directed by F. Cowles Strickland; settings designed by William M. Girvan. At the Wardman Park Theater.

—THE CAST—

Catherine .....Yvonne Kushner
Raina .....Lansing Hall
Louka .....Doris Cooper
Capt. Bluntschli .....Morris Arkin
Officer .....Robert Wickes
Nicola .....Forney Rankin
Maj. Petkoff .....Murray Sheehan
Sergius .....Norman Ross

Vain George Bernard Shaw having proved a notable strike in this season's cinema, the Washington Civic Theater has gambled its final production of the season on the hope that he might prove to be also a theatrical gold mine for it. Last night's "Arms and the Man" revealed that the hope is in line of fulfillment.

Although over 40 years old, "Arms and the Man" still is a bright and witty play, and is that rare bird, a piece that pleases while it preaches. Through characters that the Sage of Adelphi meant to be quite as absurd as they were last evening, he roars away at one of the survivals of the Dark Ages, militarism.

Capt. Bluntschli is far more familiar to many a theatergoer as Bummerli, the light-hearted central figure of Oscar Straus' operetta, "The Chocolate Soldier," which was based upon Shaw's play. There are some differences, but apparently Straus' librettist figured that what was good enough for Mr. Shaw was good enough for him.

Five-Angled Plot

In Raina's Bulgarian bed chamber all is quiet as the young girl prepares for bed. She gazes fondly at the portrait of her lover, off at the war. (Here is where one really looks for the "My Hero" waltz.) But suddenly a soldier strides into the room, fleeing pursuers outside. Of course, she protects him, for he is young and charming. Her mother helps with the hoax, even though he is of the enemy forces. But later, when the men return from the wars and tell the rollicking story of how a soldier had spent the night with some foolish ladies, Shavian conversation ripples so rapidly that one may prefer not to be concerned with the five-cornered intrigue.

Having attended all of the Civic's plays this season, your reviewer can confidently say that this is the group's high-water mark of the year. Not only have the players a fine vehicle; some of them perform perfectly and the audience reaction of a well-filled house must have been something to delight the heart of Director Strickland.

Is Excellently Cast

Morris Arkin, as the chocolate soldier, was eminently successful. With a suave manner, that was not too oily, he ripped off some neat Shavian epigrams as though he were used to lilting them all his life. Murray Sheehan blustered whole-heartedly as Maj. Petkoff, the butt of many of Shaw's quips anent the barbarism of Bulgaria. Norman Rose, the villain of many a Roadside "drammer," was quite in keeping with Shaw's caricature of a hollow and pompous soldier, Sergius.

Lansing Hall was the posing Raina and rewarded the audience with one of her most witty performances, as changing a personality as Shaw had imagined her. Doris Cooper was the tale-telling maid, a flip figure employed by the playwright to trap his empty-headed military man, Sergius. Yvonne Kushner, as the mother, and Forney Rankin, as the servant, whom socialist Shaw kept in his place, also played acceptably, as did Robert Wickes in his brief appearance as as inquisitive officer.

"Arms and the Man" is a witty and ear-tingling lesson that you should be sure to see. It is being repeated each evening this week, through Saturday.

Who for Two Weeks Has Delegated to Dorothy Manners Her

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 23 (INS).—Melvyn Douglas, the dark horse in the race, today stepped into the lead opposite Greta Garbo in "Ninotchka"—ending the quest for a hero that has gone on for months. The second guessers have been insisting that either Cary Grant or William Powell was set for the role, but from the start both Ernst Lubitsch and G. G., herself, have had Douglas in mind in rehearsing the script.

LOUELLA PARSONS

This isn't the first picture in which he has appeared with the elusive Swede. Years ago, before Melvyn hit his stride in popularity, he was featured with her in "As You Desire Me." With Garbo so aloof and Douglas so serious minded (he's one of our most ardent welfare workers, off the screen, you know), you can count on it there'll be plenty of dignity on the set. Mrs. D., who is Helen Gahagan, is going to be busy herself for the next few weeks, reviving her highly successful musical, "The Cat and the Fiddle."

After being held incommunicado ever since their arrest by the Nazis, Director Richard Rosson and his wife, Vera Sisson, were today permitted to talk to a representative of Winnie Sheehan. Later, they were released. Rosson, as you know, was in Naziland on a special location jaunt for "Florian," when he ran afoul of the law for photographing verboten "defenses" and was clamped in jail. Immediately following the short interview, Sheehan received word that the director and his wife had suffered no ill effects and had been well cared for and fed. So far, no official word has been received, but it is believed a large fine is involved, plus the complete destruction of the "dangerous" film.

Sylvia Sidney's husband, Luther Adler, planed into town today and reported immediately at R-K-O, where he made a test for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." No—not for the title role, but for a top spot in support. If the contract is signed, Sylvia will probably join her husband out here, to await the arrival of the Adler heir in a couple of months. When she left here over a year ago, Sylvia said she was through with Hollywood, but she's changed her mind in the meantime and will talk contracts when she gets here.

A line or two: Claudette Colbert goes into "Drums Along the Mohawk" with Henry Fonda at Twentieth Century-Fox. This is the first time Claudette has taken a fling at costume drama since "Maid of Salem" . . . Haven't heard anything about Luise Rainer in so long, it's interesting to learn she is touring the English provinces in the play, "Behold the Bride," and doing very well. She opens in London next week at the Shaftesbury Theater . . . Bette Davis, who shaved back her hair line three inches for her Queen Elizabeth role is scaring her friends to death threatening to shave her whole head. And don't think she wouldn't do it if it would make the part more authentic . . . Wonder why movie producers keep offering contracts and getting nothing but snubs from these society gals who are untried actresses at best? Helen Fortesque Reynolds, Eastern socialite who just got her Reno divorce, won't even listen to offers . . . What a title on that new mystery chiller Walter Wanger has just bought. It's called "Send Another Coffin," a first novel by F. G. Presnell, and Tay Garnett is set to direct . . . Bill Herbert, former King Features Syndicate writer and praise agent for C. B. De Mille for three years, is taking his adjectives over to David Selznick's as head press agent.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Now it's Bruce Cabot beauing Ann Sheridan to the Troc; so sad to hear about the death, today, of Beverly Roberts' mother. She's been ill for months, and when she knew the end was in sight she made Beverly promise to go ahead with a scheduled radio appearance; Buddy Rogers dropped into Slapsie Maxie's and told the Dodo Boy he is leaving Friday to join Mary in New York, and then, on to Europe; Zorina arrives Friday from New York with her husband, George Balanchine; their pals think Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman will get married any day now; Maurice Costello, almost as handsome as when he was top matinee idol, on the Warner lot playing extra; Doug Fairbanks, jr., holding hands with his bride at Victor Hugo, all during dinner; the New York butlers tossing a cocktail party for Arthur Treacher, who is one of them in the movies.

Dave and Margaret Epstein celebrate their fifteenth anniversary Monday—which is some sort of a record in Hollywood; Lew Ayres planed in this morning, but Ginger Rogers wasn't there to meet him; they had to get the medicos today for Wayne Morris, who has a bad case flu and is out of "Return of Dr. X;" Sally Haines Wheeler wanted to get away tomorrow, but her lawyers told her she'd have to wait until her divorce is settled before leaving for New York.

Talked to L. O. P. in Mexico today and she's having the time of her life—and, as she says—that's all for today. See you tomorrow!

I received two notes of thanks. Now I want to play that song, during Their Majesties' visit here—and, since Windsor has the only recording, I wrote and asked for it, promising to return it with two others. Well, I just got word—the Duke's secretary says he lost it." . . . "Christy Sullivan," a politician assures at Moore's, "went to see F. D. last week—to urge a third term."

He took the duck home, and cooked it." . . . "Beatrice Lillie got a letter from the Bearded Lady in the 'Strange as It Seems' Exhibit at the Fair," a producer relates at The Penthouse Club. "The Bearded Lady complained: 'You came to see our show, and walked out just when I went on. Now, Miss Lillie, I went to see you in "Set to Music"—and I didn't walk out on you.'" . . . "When the Czech Pavilion opens next week," a fair official states at the Swing Club, "Col. D.' referred only to 'Los Angeles Water Dept.'" . . .

3 a. m.—Ellen Glynn, the International Casino show girl who has been publicized as Brenda Frazier's "double," is rushed to Armando, with her publicist and a cameraman, to photograph her with Brenda. "He's in the ladies' apparel musiness, in Hollywood—selling wholesale, of course."

4 A. M. "I just saw Sheriff Slavin, of New Haven," Harry Hershfield states at Reuben's. "He used to be a chimneysweep, and now carries a small silver charm, filled with soot. He opens it, every time he feels he's going high-hat, as a reminder of his former station." . . . "Amen's witness, Max Lippe, is balking at testifying against that judge," a detective reports at Jimmy Kelly's. "Amen's had him out of jail, and down to his office."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 23.—Dashed out see H. J. Yates to find out why Republic is making money, while other studios complain about lack of it. He said: "Well, you see, we're poor people and have to make every dollar count. We can't live off our own fat. Haven't time to put it on. We're like the people who used to sit around the King's table, grateful for the crumbs.

HOPPER

"The worst thing in this or any other business is too much success. This is the only business I've ever known where you could be wrong 90 per cent of the time and still make a profit. But we never forget that our profit comes from the public.

"I want to say this: I've loaned money to many people in the picture business and never lost a dollar. I consider it the safest investment in America today—if you know how to pick your investments! The public will always pay for entertainment but not for preachment. It demands relaxation from its own woes.

"Sometimes, in their zeal to give the people something different, the producers forget that fact."

"The Man of Conquest" is such a boost for the State of Texas that the governor, in a proclamation, has urged every citizen to see it. Yates' office is at 1776 Broadway and over the entrance is a huge Liberty Bell. He doesn't talk Americanism; he lives it. He has the endurance, sturdiness, shrewdness of a New England farmer.

They may not know it, but he's teaching us many things.

Sorry I said our glamour girl, Ouspenskaya was 70. She plays 70-year-old ladies but has just turned the half century mark. When she opens her coaching school here in the fall, it won't be a racket. Unless you have talent you won't be accepted. I've applied, but so far I'm not in!

Don't be surprised if Sam Wood, who directed "Good Bye Mr. Chips" lands in another studio.

Coming out from the premier of that picture, Paul Muni whispered to his companion, "Sorry. You'll have to do the talking. Donat's left me speechless."

There's double praying going on over at United Artists. Goldwyn wants sun for "The Real Glory." Wanger wants jog to keep the snow and ice cool on "Winter Cnairvl' cmfwypu vbgkqj cmfwyp Carnival." So far, Wanger's way ahead.

One of Wanger's ski jumpers was afraid he'd miss his mark, and go over into the next set. Wanger asked: "So what? So you'd be working for Goldwyn." But just try to get double pay!

Sonja Henie, sweltering in an overladen fur-trimmed coat on the "Second Fiddle" set, sighed: "Will the time ever come when I can wear a bathing-suit instead of furs?"

One of the grandest freindships in Hollywood is between John Garfield and Charles Boyer. They're tennis buddies, as well as intellectuals.

Just before Barbara Stanwyck married Bob, she said: "Oh, I must have something old." And ran out to her car, got her hairdresser's hat, which she had worn the day before.

I just read a review from Germany on "Test Pilot" and Clark America's unsung heroes.

Someone erroneously wrote that Madeleine Carroll was about to become a little mother. So on Mother's Day she received 50 telegrams from various people kidding the life out of her. Now she's gunning for the Marx Brothers.

Hellzapoppin at Metro. They've rounded up every vaudeville actor in the country for "Babes in Arms." And how they troupe! Their between-scenes with Irene Franklin singing her old songs, is better than many pictures I've seen lately.

Star Uses Photo As Make-up Guide

Miss Bette Davis will be the image of her mother soon.

Photographs of Mrs. Ruth F. Davis taken when she was 40 years of age are being used by her daughter, Bette, for her role in "The Old Maid," in which she will appear first as a girl of 20, later as a mature woman of two-score years.

Inspiration to use the mother's likeness as a make-up guide was Bette's own, and was eagerly adopted by Perc Westmore, genius of the studio make-up department.

Gale Has Too Much 'Umph' for a Witch

Gale Sondergaard, famed dramatic actress who is about to essay her first screen burlesque, disclosed today that she recently lost a coveted role because she had "too much sex appeal."

Miss Sondergaard was cast for the witch role in the "Wizard of Oz" at M-G-M, but when executives saw her decked out in snappy sequins they sadly canceled her assignment. She just didn't look like a witch.

Auto Strike Deadlocked; 65,000 Out

Negotiation Attempts Fail; Mediation Moves By Dewey Awaited

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 23.—Failure of attempts to open settlement negotiations today marked a strike which in two days has thrown out of employment some 65,000 persons in nearly a score of automotive plants.

Neither the Briggs Manufacturing Co., seven units of which closed yesterday when their union employes struck, nor officials of the CIO-affiliated United Automobile Workers, who have demanded a "union shop" in Briggs plants, retreated from positions taken before the strike started.

The Briggs plants alone employ 15,000. Also idle were ten plants of the Chrysler Corporation, employing 47,500 persons; the Lincoln division of the Ford company, with 5,000 employes, and 250 workers at the L. A. Young Spring & Wire Co. here.

Mediation moves by James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, who aided in settling the General Motors and Chrysler strikes here in 1937, and who was assigned to seek an agreement in the present difficulty, were awaited.

Emil Mazey, president of Briggs Local 212, of the CIO-U. A. W., telephoned Briggs officials this afternoon seeking a conference.

He was informed that "we still are willing to arbitrate all differences between us."

Mazey, who last week rejected an offer to submit all grievances of the union employes to arbitration, replied, "You know my telephone number."

The strike followed a breakdown of grievance negotiations after union officials charged the management wanted to "horse-trade on legitimate grievances."

U. S. Lifts Ban On Exportation Of Helium Gas

The State Department announced last night that it has adopted new regulations governing the exportation of helium which will permit foreign governments to use 500,000 cubic feet of the gas a year for "medical, scientific and commercial purposes."

Observers said the rules will not make sufficient helium available for Germany for inflation of the huge dirigible it built to replace the Hindenberg, which crashed in flames two years ago at Lakehurst, N. J.

The new rule, it was understood, was promulgated to release helium, of which this country has a world monopoly, to Poland, which plans to use it in a stratosphere observation dirigible.

Senate Expected To Confirm Allen Nomination Today

Unanimous approval of the President's nomination of George Allen as District Commissioner was reported to the Senate yesterday afternoon by the Senate District Committee.

Senate confirmation is expected today.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of District reorganization, announced he would meet with the Commissioners this morning on local government revision plans.

"They can bring anybody they want to with them, and I hope Mr. Allen will come, confirmed or not," he said.

HOLC Sees Small Income Group Staging Comeback

Charles A. Jones, general manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, looked over the borrowers' accounts yesterday and said the householder of small or moderate income is staging an economic comeback.

A record increase in paid-in-full loans.

An increase in paying off back instalments.

Increase in collections over corresponding months in 1938.

A record spurt in sale of small homes.

A Brawl In Danzig

It is a curious commentary on our vaunted isolation that the shooting in Danzig last Sunday of an obscure German butcher, by an equally obscure Polish chauffeur, should have received so much newspaper publicity in the American press.

Had this affray occurred in New York or Singapore, or in most other cities, it would never have got into the world's headlines. But Danzig happens to be an international powder barrel. A spark may set it off and the ensuing explosion would certainly shake Europe to its foundations.

No wonder, then, that American newspapers gave prominence to the story. For Americans to an overwhelming degree have come to realize that a war in Europe would have devastating consequences to us, whether or not we became physically involved.

It is also significant that immediately after the shooting completely contradictory versions of the affair emanated from German and Polish sources. Obviously neither party to the Danzig issue is minimizing the importance of world public opinion. That is why each side sought to fix the blame for the shooting on the other so that, if the episode had unfortunate consequences, sentiment outside their own borders would be favorable.

Fortunately, the spark seems to have sputtered and died out; the powder barrel was not ignited. But the danger of an explosion has by no means been entirely removed. That is why Danzig will continue to be an electric word and why every brawl that may take place there will be subjected to intense scrutiny, even in places thousands of miles removed from the Free City.

Enforcement Policy

In a statement issued last week the Department of Justice pointed out that the purpose of the anti-trust laws "is not to harass businessmen but to give businessmen the right to compete in a free field without favor and to give the consumers the benefit of orderly and healthy competition."

In the eyes of many the anti-trust laws have come to be regarded as a sort of concealed weapon which may at any moment be used by the Government for destructive purposes. The reassuring words of the Department of Justice reveal a sympathetic understanding of this attitude. What is more important, the department evidently realizes that there is good reason for the deep-seated distrust on the part of many businessmen. To allay these fears the department again reiterates that "the policy of enforcement should not vary according to the individual views of the officials charged with the duty of enforcement."

That assurance is wholly desirable. But, judging from past experience, the problem is more difficult in practice than in precept. Certainly there has for years been a deplorable lack of consistency in enforcement policies. It is next to impossible to know what may or may not be done without running afoul of the anti-trust laws. With constant shifts in the personnel of the Department of Justice there can never be any absolute guarantee against future surprise assaults. For the present, however, the emphasis on consistent continuity of action and policy is in the ascendant.

Nevertheless, the same statement gives warning that the department intends to proceed vigorously with prosecutions when there is evidence of "substantial" violation of the anti-trust laws. Milk distribution and the building industry are singled out for special mention as lines of activity which would repay investigation. In respect to housing, notice is given of attack on unlawful restraints of trade which will be "comprehensive enough to cover the whole industry."

If prosecutions were instituted only after searching preliminary inquiry the anti-trust laws would soon cease to be regarded with suspicion by law-abiding businessmen. It is the "hit or miss prosecutions, launched without due consideration of all the facts or the consequences involved" that are, as the Department of Justice acknowledges, "harmful to business and Government alike." Perhaps the greatest value of the current investigations of the Temporary National Economic Committee is their implicit insurance that thorough inquiry will precede punitive action where monopoly is suspected.

Gambling On A Hunch

With increasing frequency, as his efforts to solve basic economic problems have proved futile, President Roosevelt has resorted in his speeches to a rather shopworn oratorical device. He seeks to turn the tables on his critics by accusing them of the very faults or failings which are attributed to him. When it will stand up under analysis such a counterattack is very effective. But when neither logic nor reason nor common sense are in support, the impression, once the magnetism of the speaker has evaporated, is not happy.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech to the forum of the American Retail Federation on Monday night is a case in point. Because pump-priming is so clearly a dubious experiment the President retorts that those who criticize it are "gambling on a hunch." Because there is increasing anxiety about continuous deficit financing Mr. Roosevelt denounces those who are perturbed as "wild-eyed radicals." New Dealers, he says, "are the conservatives because we simply cannot bring ourselves to take radical chances with other people's property and other people's lives."

In a sense the President is justified in calling his deficit-financing policy "conservative." It is conservative to the extent that it has been used since time immemorial by governments without the wisdom, ingenuity or courage to face their problems squarely. It is certainly not radical, if radical is used in its true meaning of a policy designed to grapple with the roots of a problem. Indeed reactionary is the most accurate term for Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward the soaring national debt. The dislike of confronting an annoying catastrophe is as old as Nero or Nebuchadnezzar, who in their place and time could also find good alibis for indifference to fiscal difficulties.

Unfortunately for the President's argument it is all too easy to show that he himself is the one who is playing a speculative hunch "in the hope that in some mysterious way a miracle will occur." The miracle which he seeks is a stable national income of at least eighty billions and his "speculative hunch" is the anticipation that with this achieved, "present taxes will be sufficient to meet expenditures on the present scale."

Such rosy anticipation is an old, old story, relied upon by millions of men; by thousands of companies, by scores of governments—all of them now swept by disaster from the stage. And all this oft-repeated tragedy roots in the inability to see that there comes a time, in the evolution of a man, an institution or a nation, when the mounting accumulation of debt is not merely hypothetically dangerous but inevitably disastrous.

In the case of the individual this time can be defined with some precision. Debt for constructive purposes may be incurred with equanimity as long as there is good prospect of a rising personal income. But the man whose expenditure habitually exceeds his revenue when his income has reached its maximum is rightly regarded by his fellows as a spendthrift fool.

Different only in kind is the case of the business which steadily increases its debt at a time when the industry of which it is a part confronts a period of stationary or diminishing returns. Like President Roosevelt, many an American railroad management has argued in the past that given a larger income it could readily meet increased obligations out of current revenues. But now we all know that the railroads as a whole are no longer an expanding industry.

In similar manner the President lightheartedly assumes that the United States is still an expanding nation. This assumption, in view of the known facts, is more optimistic than convincing. Our population curve has flattened out; our birthrate is low; our immigration is sharply curtailed and seemingly will continue to be so. Nor is there, in any other field of measurement, any reliable indication of the steady upward trend which would justify a mounting debt on the strength of future prospects.

So President Roosevelt throws a boomerang when he indicts those who are gambling "on nothing more than their personal hunch." It is his personal hunch that somehow by deficit financing we may achieve an annual national income of eighty billions. Perhaps, if that hunch proves valid, "income from present taxes will be sufficient to meet expenditures on the present scale." But the "if" is big. And nothing the Administration is doing serves to keep it from growing on the horizon.

New District Judge

In appraising candidates nominated for the bench the qualifications which stand out above all others are judicial temperament, experience and learning in the law. Consequently, President Roosevelt's choice of James W. Morris, Assistant Attorney General, to be an associate justice of the United States District Court here should be set down as an excellent appointment.

Washingtonians always prefer to see eminent members of the local bar elevated to the District bench. There is a general tendency to give too little attention to the qualifications of Washington lawyers who are thoroughly familiar with the legal background of this jurisdiction. But local background is much less important than mental equipment for a jurist on the bench. When the President selects a highly competent nominee from the Government service few will complain because he has passed over equally capable Washington attorneys.

The nomination of Mr. Morris is gratifying in one other respect. With an able and active additional judge in the District Court, it should be possible to eliminate many of the delays in trying civil cases, without depriving the criminal bench of the three judges necessary to guarantee every defendant a speedy trial.

Blow At Bigotry

Those who are familiar with the record of John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, gave no heed to the innuendo apparently intended to connect him with anti-Semitism. For purposes of the record, however, it is well that Mr. Hamilton has reiterated his liberal and tolerant attitude before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities.

"All my life," says Mr. Hamilton, "any form of intolerance has been hateful to me. My first campaigns in public life were marked by my opposition to the Ku Klux Klan. I have always opposed any movement to penalize any man because of his race or because of the manner in which he chooses to worship God. . . . Intolerance, to my mind, is as great an enemy of these American institutions as is communism, fascism, naziism or any other alien 'ism'."

Mr. Hamilton's statement is worth emphasizing, not only because it fully clears away false implications of previous testimony before the committee as to his personal attitude, but also because it reflects the traditional American view. Democracy can thrive only when racial prejudices are eliminated or submerged and when tolerance for differing beliefs is assured. It is a well-known fact that bigotry sometimes crops out, even in this country, and that it is occasionally fostered by unprincipled politicians. But, thanks to the high-minded attitude taken by most political leaders and the public at large, movements of this sort are more likely to act as a boomerang than a prop to any candidate associated with them.

In throwing his influence against the intolerant Rev. Gerald B. Winrod in the Republican primaries in Kansas last year, Mr. Hamilton struck an effective blow at any bigotry in the Republican Party. Equally impressive was the repudiation by Thomas E. Dewey of any support that might have been given him in his New York gubernatorial race by intolerant groups. Representative Dies can count on full support from both the major parties in exposing the work of bigots so utterly out of harmony with the ideals of free government.

Ernst Toller

Ernst Toller, German author, believed passionately in democracy and freedom. For years he had carried on a brilliant and courageous battle for these principles. To the very end his spirit did not slacken. But in the struggle he weakened his health beyond endurance. That is probably why, rather than for any reasons of financial need or other troubles, he committed suicide in his New York apartment last Monday.

Toller's story is that of a great part of Germany of the last years. It is a story of a fruitless search, following the war, for a state compatible with the human spirit and with reason. It is a story, also, of an unending battle with material and irrational forces.

Recently, in Washington, while here with the P. E. N. group, and again only the night before he died, Mr. Toller said he was not discouraged and would continue his fight indefinitely for his political and social ideals.

That fight had already carried him through two imprisonments under the republic and led to his exile under Hitler. And in the background was 18 months of fighting with the German army during the war, before he was invalided home.

Adversity seemed to stimulate his intellectual activities, however, and some of Toller's best works were written while in prison and exile. Among these, one that achieved wide recognition, was his autobiography, "I Was a German." And he was a German in the fullest sense of the word and to the very marrow of his being although his spirit was universal.

In another era, Toller with his fine sensitivity and his capacity to translate his impressions into great artistic creations would now have been at the very height of his creative powers. But, at 46, Toller's body was no longer equal to the needs of his spirit. He had written many dramatic tales. But the story of his life, of a losing battle of David with Goliath, is far more significant and poignant than even his own words could tell.

One of the worst habits a Southern farmer has is going out in the spring and planting cotton all over the place.

Becoming wiser today isn't an unmixed blessing. It causes you to realize what a fool you were yesterday.

Excitement

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all the excitement about the visit of a King and Queen? We have had kings here before, and queens, too, without losing our heads or exhibiting hysterics. Also, if the President of the French Republic or the President of the Swiss Confederation should visit us, should we become equally febrile in our ecstasy? And yet if we are really loyal to the republic form of government the elected chief of France or of Switzerland should mean infinitely more to us than any monarch on earth.

For a long time it has been evident that certain interests on both sides of the Atlantic are eager for some form of alliance or partnership between the United States and England. I am wondering if the evidently ballyhooed visit of our royal visitors at this time is connected with that project?

The USHA's View Of Subsidies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to thank you for your editorial of May 14, entitled "Housing Subsidies," and for printing on the same day my communication to you about your editorial of May 5. I think that this type of public discussion between Federal Administrators and newspapers of national significance is healthy and desirable. Your tendency to encourage it is all to the good.

In your most recent editorial, you challenged the method by which I computed that the net annual cost to the Federal Government per family rehoused was $115.50. I arrived at this figure by deducting, from the gross annual contributions to be paid each year, the interest profits represented by the fact that the USHA is now borrowing money at 1⅜ per cent and lending it at 3 per cent.*

As a statement of present fact, my computation is certainly not open to dispute. The profit which the USHA is making on its loan transactions is just as real a part of our business operations as the granting of annual contributions.

Your editorial points out that I cannot know at what rate the USHA will be able to borrow in the future, and that therefore I cannot know whether there will be an interest profit on future transactions. It is possible, of course, to assume that interest rates will be higher or lower in the future, that operating costs will be higher or lower in the future, or that incomes will be higher or lower in the future. Variations in any of these factors would raise or lower the future subsidy cost. But there is no reason for disregarding actual present interest rates in favor of assumed future interest rates, any more than there would be reason for disregarding present building costs in favor of assumptions as to what they may be in the future.

Suffice it to say that my statement of $115.50 cost to the Federal Government per family rehoused is based upon present building costs, present operating costs, present annual contributions, present incomes and present interest rate of 1⅜ per cent; while your estimate of $158 cost to the Federal Government per family rehoused is based upon an assumed future interest rates of at least 3 per cent, or more than twice as high as the present rate.

In estimating the cost of the local annual contribution (in the form of tax exemption) per family rehoused, your editorial took the gross Federal annual contribution of $158, added to it the $14.50 representing the annual cost of slum clearance per family, and then divided by two (on the basis of my statement that the local annual contribution averaged about half the Federal annual contribution), thus arriving at a figure of about $86. This is erroneous.

The inclusion of the $14.50 figure for slum clearance in your computation is incorrect, because (a) where the slum clearance is on the site of the new project, the normal taxes on the new project would be based upon its value and not upon the value of slum buildings torn down, and (b) where the slum clearance or equivalent elimination is off the site of the new project, there is no Federal annual contribution for this slum clearance, and there is no local annual contribution either because the areas so cleared are not exempt from local taxes.

In fact the areas so cleared are almost invariably devoted to commercial purposes yielding higher taxes than the slums. In any event, my statement that the local annual contributions amounted to half the Federal annual contributions was based upon my estimate of the cost to the Federal Government per family rehoused, which was lower than your estimate. Your higher estimate of the Federal cost at most changes the ratio between the two; it does not raise the local cost correspondingly.

What is more important, the statement that the local annual contribution in the form of tax exemption amounts to half the Federal annual contribution is based upon the full taxes that would be levied against the new project if it were operated by a private operator as a profit-making venture. While this is a fair measure of the benefit which tax exemption confers upon the project and therefore of the "local contribution," it is certainly not a fair measure of what the city actually loses when it exempts a new public housing project from taxation.

The only revenues that the city actually loses when a new public housing project is built are the revenues previously levied against the slums that have been replaced. These levies against the slums represent in all cases only a small fraction of the taxes that normally would be levied against the new project if it were not exempt.

In summary, with an actual annual cost to the Federal Government of about $115.50 per family rehoused, and an annual cost to the locality per family rehoused which at the very top limit is only half the Federal annual cost and which in reality is probably very much less than this, my original statement stands that the total annual cost to the Federal Government and the locality per family rehoused is only about half the $312 figure which you cited in your editorial of May 5 for the Louisville project. The cost is from $75 to $100 lower than the $258 figure which you cited in your editorial of May 14.

I readily admit that in addition to the annual cost per family rehoused, there is an annual cost for demolishing slum buildings equivalent to about $14.50 per family rehoused.

NATHAN STRAUS,
Administrator of the USHA.
Washington, May 20.

*Editor's Note: The USHA is lending money to local housing authorities for 60 years. This money money is obtained by issuing bonds that mature in five years, with interest at 1⅜ per cent. The average rate of interest paid by the Government for long and short term issues, even in this period of favorable interest rates, is 2 3-5 per cent.

Palestine

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How about cutting the knot and denationalizing Palestine, as Shanghai is denationalized?

Have it governed through the League of Nations by a commission representing all three faiths—Mahomedan, Jewish and Christian—to which the land is holy.

Independence for a Jewish Palestine would sharpen anti-Semitism abroad, where most Jews will remain. It would increase Jewish foreignness.

It would be a shocking injustice to the Mahomedans, the most tolerant of the three factions. They have been in Palestine longer than the Jews.

What quarrel have the Jews with Britain anyway? Britain doesn't own Palestine (except between ourselves.) It is the mandatory of the league. The Jews must prove title through the mandate, and not through the irrelevant and inadmissible Balfour Declaration.

THOMAS McMORROW.
Washington, May 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial on the Palestinian problem and the sane attitude taken by Mr. Julius Peyser, of this city, embolden me to add my regret, if not my protest, against the charge that because some of us do not believe in Zionism as a movement, we are anti-Semitic.

We claim that we are the best friends of the Jew who would not have him send a million or more of his people to a land 150 miles long and 30 miles wide, with one-third of it desert, there to be encircled by hostile and (as they think) outraged Moslem Arabs and Christain Arabs, whose millions on millions would make Jewish life in a Jewish Palestine state worse than any "ghetto" the world has ever known. It would take an army of British soldiers as large as the population of Jews in Palestine to protect this Jewish contingent, not to speak of the upheaval which giving this strip of the Arabian peninsula to the Jews would mean to the Moslem world, practically looking now to the British Empire as their "protector."

The Holy Land of promise is not a literal land so small and so poor as Palestine, burnt by periodic droughts and shaken by earthquakes. The land of promise is a "spiritual state," into which the "children of Abraham, in number like the sands of the sea," can enter and no one say the land is full. The "sons of Abraham" are those who in spirit follow him in his faith; not those who happen to be his offspring by mere blood only.

The Jew's place in the scheme of providence, if we believe the Bible and the pointings of history, is that of a spiritual leadership exemplified by those incomparable men of old who "spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." No higher call or place could be given any people than this. We who see in Zionism only a politico-economic move, fed by sentiment which can easily lead to rash outbursts against the British people, the best friends the Jews have had, are not anti-Semitic, but have the true conception of the Jew's mission as we believe.

Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler's Post column of May 22, concerning uses made of income tax returns, is a thought provoker.

Future historians may give a prominent place to the inquisitorial income tax amendment in beginnings of the end to our experiment in constitutional democracy.

The Post Impressionist

The Nightmare

THE GRAY-HAIRED ARTIST rubbed his hand across his mouth with a gesture of repulsion as though he were brushing away a cobweb. "Oh, yes, I knew him," he said. "But for my fantastically good memory, I'd have forgotten little him long ago. I wish I could."

None of us said anything. He would go on if he wasn't pressed. "That was in 1912. I was there painting furiously, admiring tremendously wild men like Franz Marc and the Russian, Burliuk. The word 'expressionism' was invented to cover the painting done in Munich in those days.

"For some time before I noticed him he must have been sitting on the fringes of the crowd of painters that met every night in the cheapest beer garden. I think I felt sorry for him, he looked so solitary in the midst of all that enthusiasm. Probably I'm imagining that after the fact. But I did try to pull him out. There was something of Chaplin's grotesque little solitary about him all right—without the pathetic eagerness—or the mustache yet—or the feet. The feet were small and placed primly together.

"He lived by tinting postcards, and in his spare time ground out dull water colors for all the world like his postcards. Brought a batch of them to my lodgings one day, and even in my vast kindness, I couldn't praise them. He didn't mind, he was so satisfied with the piddling things himself.

"Had no idea they were bad. Had no ideas about anything, not a glimmer. I probed and poked, I tell you, and there was nothing there, just nothing. I hear now he says he hewed out the 'granite bases of his thought' in Vienna a couple of years before that. I've a notion the ghastly business came about otherwise, and it keeps me awake nights."

Our painter friend rubbed his whole face now as though the skin were crawling. "Can you see him as he was then? Just another of those colorless people who drift toward any group. They do and say nothing, they're just there. That was how he was. Even I, and I'm so magnificently sympathetic it's a curse, checked him off after a couple of tries. Nothing to bother with.

"Do you want to hear the rest of this story?" he asked suddenly.

We told him there wasn't even a story so far, just a man on the fringes of a crowd of crazy painters. But we sensed a story in his peculiar gestures.

"That's all there was until one hot August night in 1913. My funds were running low, but I managed to hang on in Munich through that summer. So there I was swilling liquor as usual, and spilling my ideas with the loudest the night the brawl started. I think it began in an argument over Kandinsky's latest cataclysm in color. We were beery and intense and before I knew it a mug flew through the air. I swear it wasn't mine, though when the fighting got general I admit I didn't have a mug to wield. Mine had wandered.

"I fastened on to the next best thing, a sausage lying on the table. It was practically intact, only a small hunk cut off one end, and it was about the length and heft of a billy club. Nice weapon, and I swung about me pretty handsomely. The sausage wasn't exactly lethal, but I got in some dull blows.

"Somehow the little fellow was sucked into the melee—didn't have the brains to argue with anyone about anything and so was innocent enough—but that's always the way. He was shoved into the arc of my sausage, and first thing I knew I had walloped him a good one on the side of the head. He was out like a light.

"I remember thinking my Irish grandfather would say he had no kind of skull to go to a county fair with. A shillalah would have shattered it. I did all too well with a sausage. So I cleared out of there in a hurry.

"That's all there is." The telling seemed to release his tension. "I never saw him after that. The only thing that gets me is an idea I know is crazy, I know it. It's just that I'm sure he had none of his fantastic philosophy up that August night. Maybe he developed his madness during the war—God knows men did—but he wasn't injured, not seriously. And he says he welcomed the war as a deliverance. I tell you the guy I socked with a sausage would have run away from any war. Sometime before 1914, mind you, something changed that runt—and I keep thinking it was my sausage.

"Oh, I know, I know—it's only in the movies that personalities are transformed by falling flowerpots. Just the same, after 1914, he impressed everyone who remembers him at all as the kind of crackpot who wouldn't stay off soapboxes. From an oyster he became, hocus-pokus, an orator. You explain it—without my sausage."

He polished off his drink and then confessed: "I'd almost forgotten that slice of my life when I saw his water colors reproduced and those strawberry sundae creations brought the whole thing back to me. By day, I've been thinking of the Munich painters of those years—those that are still alive can't exhibit in Germany today, so they might as well be dead. By night, I've been dreaming—I think I'm developing a guilt complex. I keep dreaming about one of Dali's paintings—that's how serious my condition is."

"You mean," Joe asked, "the little number with a telephone shedding a single luminous tear on a plate containing a news photo?"

"No, no, not that imperishable masterpiece," said the artist in exaggerated protest. "This is just a minor work. One of Dali's technicolor deserts over which looms in a tile blue sky an enormous sausage. There's a tiny figure standing in the sand in the foreground, and in my dream I never dare look at it. But I know without looking who it is."

Fair Enough

The Art Of Crashing

THE LIMITATION of bids to the royal garden party at the British Embassy almost puts it up to the fourth estate to revive the fine old art of gate-crashing, which has become almost extinct in journalism. This thought probably has occurred to other members of the craft, and it may be taken for granted that efforts already have been made to case the joint and learn who delivers the groceries, meat and bloaters and whether any of these persons would like to lay off and go to the ball game on the day of days. The possibilities are not exhausted by the closing of the guest list and the knowledge that there will be detectives from the Federal service as well as Scotland Yard men guarding the portals and pouring grog in the guise of butlers or lushing the same in the guise of deserving Democrats.

An American fly cop might be willing to tie his shoe while a particular friend passed in, and it was a detective from Scotland Yard, no less, who made it possible for your correspondent and Mr. Floyd Gibbons to crash the gate at the lying in state of the late father of the present King Emperor in London a few years ago and not only made it possible but initiated the idea. You never know until you try, and if you miss the worst that can happen is a quiet heave into the alley. They wouldn't be likely to bend any blackjacks over a man's head in such circumstances, and a lady journalist could give them the old "sir, how dast you!" And threaten to lie down and scream that they had socked her a couple. They couldn't let that happen.

Dignified Entry Is Highest Form

BUT THAT grocer's boy and butcher's boy business is longshoreman's stuff, and the true art of crashing calls for a dignified entrance through the front gate, and that calls for nerve, poise and scenic effect. There was a lady on the News here in New York in the late Phil Payne's day who crashed the reception after a Vanderbilt wedding with her hair whitened up with powder and got away with it by smiling at everybody and pretending to be elderly and deaf. When they stopped her at the door she just smiled and kept on going, and that was all there was to it except that she adopted a trick of walking up to people and saying, "And how is your dear old mother? Please tell her I shall call her up real soon. I am very hard of hearing. I can't hear a word you say."

At Garmisch during the winter Olympics Paul Gallico crashed a cordon of Hitler's black guards by busting through from behind and saying with a stupid grin, "Excuse, please. Ich Amerikanischer not speak German language." They could have thrown him out, but they didn't, and then he was where he wanted to be.

Dress For Part; That's Best Way

FRONT IS best. If a man or woman, dressed for the part, crashed right through as though it were insulting not to know him or her by sight there is one terrible second of suspense, and it either works or it doesn't. It works in a surprising percentage of attempts, and my old man worked it beautifully once when the examiners were going over the papers of an absconding bank president in Chicago. He just walked in, laid his stick and gloves on the board table and said, "Well, let us proceed to business, gentleman," and somehow the examiners thought he was the banker's lawyer and the lawyer thought he was an examiner until he got up to catch an edition. Someone then asked him, "And whom do you represent?"

"Hearst's Chicago American," my old man said and bowed out.

Art Of Crashing Shows Deterioration

I WOULD GIVE something to see Herbert Bayard Swope putting the crash at the royal garden party, because Mr. Swope just about took over the peace conference in Paris, and an embassy party would be just a drop-in for him. He might even send downtown for his bags and dig in for a few days, provided he liked the place and the King didn't interrupt him.

I don't know what has happened to the art of crashing. In Louisville I saw old One-eyed Connelly, who used to clatter around the country with his baggage in a cigar box, all sooty and baggy from riding the blinds, and he was laundered and pressed now and attended the Derby on a pass instead of crashing. He said he had hit the daily double at a Florida horse yard and was riding the cushions and sleeping no more in culverts and flophouses but in regular hotels.

British-Russian Pact Decision Believed Near

Halifax Said to Have Agreed 'In Principle' To Morsow Terms

By the Associated Press.

London, May 23.—Lengthy British-Russian negotiations are believed near a showdown tonight with informed Paris and Geneva sources reporting that an agreement "in principle" already had been reached for a Soviet-British-French mutual aid accord.

The British cabinet will meet tomorrow to decide whether to accept Russia's terms for joining the British-French front.

[It was expected the tentative principles of the new pact will be announced in the House of Commons tomorrow by Prime Minister Chamberlain, International News Service said.—Editor's Note.]

The Geneva and Paris reports said Britain's chief negotiator, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, had agreed "in principle" to those conditions, and informed London observers believed the British government was ready to meet the Soviet desires.

Officials, however, refused to forecast the cabinet's action.

France Adds Pressure

Lord Halifax was understood to have been persuaded by Russia's refusal to consider anything less than comprehensive mutual assistance guarantees, and by strong pressure from French Foreign Minister Bonnet and the chief of the French general staff, Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, who probably would be generalissimo of combined British and French land forces in event of war.

The British foreign secretary, leaving Geneva tonight for London, was reported prepared to urge agreement on the cabinet. His government, although not expected to accept any hard and fast text, was pictured as likely to announce acceptance "in principle" of the tri-power arrangement and then negotiate further with Moscow on details.

League Given New Life

As they prepared to leave Geneva tonight, Halifax and Bonnet gave the League of Nations, whose council session brought them here, hope of new life through the projected three-power agreement.

To add League prestige to the British-French led bloc of nations, the two statesmen declared that when their negotiations were completed any agreements would be "communicated" to the League.

Soviet insistence upon complete reciprocity in an tri-power alliance was understood to mean that the extent and type of Russian aid to Poland, Rumania and Turkey must be paralleled by British action.

Although one or two Cabinet members still held out against a far-reaching three-power pact, most of them were said to have been persuaded by public sentiment and by pressure from France and Turkey that a British-Russian agreement must be reached regardless of the terms.

Poland Removes Objections

One of the major obstacles in the way of Britain's entry into a close alliance with Soviet Russia was removed when Poland informed the British government she had no objections to a tri-power pact on the basis now under consideration.

Rumania was believed to have taken the same position. Both powers previously had objected to any arrangement under which Soviet troops might be sent onto their soil without their consent.

London, May 23 (INS).—Poland and Rumania have agreed to extend their long-standing mutual assistance pact, it reported tonight.

The Polish-Rumanian pact originally was concluded as a protective link against Soviet Russia. Under the new extension it has been arranged in such a way that it covers aggression from any other nation.

Oxford Reverses Itself

By Penn Kimball

Conscription Now Favored

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Oxford.

LED BY sons of two former conservative ministers, the Oxford Union, world-famous undergraduate debating society, recently confirmed by a narrow margin the decision of the Chamberlain government to abandon a long-cherished British policy in favor of compulsory, peacetime military service for youths between the ages of 20 and 21.

The debate was on a motion put forward by the undergraduate son of A. L. Amery, former minister for colonies, and seconded by Randolph Churchill, offspring of the talented Winston. A crowded hall of England's future soldiers carried the resolution: "That this house welcomes compulsory conscription." The vote stood 423 ayes and 326 noes.

Although many of those taking part in the debate will soon be forced to abandon their studies for a six-month training course in the British army, a majority of 93 hailed the move as an indication that England at last means business in opposing the expansive ambitions of Hitler and Mussolini to redraw the map of Europe. Rejecting the arguments put forward by adherents of the Labor Party that compulsory service is merely a blind for fresh concessions by a Fascist-inclined Tory cabinet, the supporters of the motion pleaded for bigger and better measures to conscript the resources of the country. That would be, they urged, a practical warning of England's refusal to tolerate further subjugation of small nations under the yoke of totalitarian invasion.

CLIMAXING a year-long protest against submission to the dictators, the decision was reached in a hushed but excited atmosphere. The meeting was the most momentous the union has had since the passage of the notorious Oxford pledge six years ago. The announcement of the polling brought loud cheers from those who have long been vocally restless under a policy which promised to jeopardize any hopes for the future of the nation's youth. By their vote Oxford undergraduates made clear their willingness to bear the brunt of this new sacrifice in pursuit of liberty and justice in Europe. It was the logical conclusion of a consistent policy of protest against appeasement which began at the time of the annexation of Austria a year ago and has steadily gained force since.

At that time the union went on record as supporting the resignation of Anthony Eden and since then has passed resolutions deploring the Munich Agreement and advocating a firm stand by England's leaders.

Thoroughly disillusioned by the fruits of Chamberlain retreat, Oxford undergraduates since last September have been picketing the Houses of Parliament, have campaigned against government candidates in by-elections and have addressed petitions to members of the House of Commons to abandon the policy of appeasement. In February, they co-operated with 2,000 students from every corner of the United Kingdom in a vast demonstration in London advocating an immediate program of collective security.

SIGNIFICANTLY enough, in spite of the narrow majority in favor of compulsory service, not a single youthful voice was raised during the debate in support of the prime minister. Instead, the opposition based its objection to conscription on the inadvisability of taking such a momentous step under the leadership of the discredited Conservative cabinet. The argument, put forward by the military correspondent of the London Times, that a large British overseas land force would be unwise in any future war on the Continent was also stated.

These young men believe that an immediate alliance with Russia, conscription of the national wealth and a powerful ministry of supply are required as pledges of good faith by the Chamberlain government that the sacrifice asked of the nation's youth are part and parcel of a genuine program of collective security.

Thoroughly disgusted with the course of events during the past 12 months, the great majority of Oxford undergraduates still despair of any hope that the forces directing British policy at present can be trusted to renounce a peace at any price decision in the event of another crisis.

Leader Asserts Saving Banks Shun Home Loan System

By the Associated Press.

A. George Gilman, of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, said yesterday legislation proposed to attract savings banks into the Federal Home Loan Bank system was not desired by the banks themselves.

Gilman, chairman of the association's committee on Federal legislation, appeared before the House Banking and Currency Committee considering a bill introduced by Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama.

Gilman related that portions of the bill would make first mortgages and securities eligible as collateral for advances by Federal Home Loan Banks to their membership. Mortgages now acceptable for such advances are limited largely by present law to the field of one-family home and small multi-family dwellings.

President Stands Pat

By Ernest K. Lindley

Defensive Speech

THE PRESIDENT'S address to the American Retail Federation was spirited but defensive. It was essentially a "stand-pat" speech. That is, the President stood pat on the New Deal program in its present form.

The speech was a disappointment to those who expected hints of a new and enlarged Government program of spending and investment. Many who listened doubtless were relieved rather than disappointed. The President implied that he wants to hold expenditures to about their present amount until the national income rises to eighty billion dollars annually. At that level, according to Treasury estimates, the present tax laws would yield enough revenue to pay for expenditures on the present scale.

In digging in, instead of sounding the call for another advance, the President made it easier to attack the budget-balancers as "gamblers" and "radicals." These labels are not far-fetched, especially when they are applied to the extremists who want to make immediate and drastic cuts in Federal expenditures. As this column has pointed out repeatedly, there is no modern experience to support the theory that balancing the budget will bring about the expansion of business activity. Such experience as is available, including our own, points to the opposite conclusion.

Budget Balancing Caused Recession

MR. ROOSEVELT neglected to mention that he succeeded in balancing the budget for about nine months during his second term. The balancing of income and outgo came abruptly after a year in which outgo had exceeded income by about three billion dollars. A good many economists regard this abrupt balancing as one of the chief causes of the recession of 1937-38—a recession which was converted into an upturn when the Government launched another program of spending and investment.

To defy the weight of experience is to gamble. Moreover, as Mr. Roosevelt brought out, the sector of the budget in which the advocates of economy seem to be most eager to cut is WPA. The only important saving to be made here is by substituting "the dry-rot of idleness on the dole."

To the familiar warning that we are bequeathing to our children and grandchildren a great burden of Federal debt, the President made the obvious and accurate reply that if they have to pay the interest on the debt they will pay it to themselves.

Too Much Saving Reduced Buying

TAKEN SEPARATELY, however, several passages probably will be jumped upon by the economists—including the New Deal species. Even taken as a whole, the speech left a good deal to be desired by the Administration economists, who are trying to work out a comprehensive program for the next few years of the New Deal.

In the first part of his speech the President defended the emphasis which the New Deal has laid on the direct increase of consumer buying power. This is in line with the widely held theory that even during the '20's too much of the national income was saved, not enough funneled into the hands of the people who would spend it. That conclusion was reached by the conservative Brookings Institution in a notable series of studies a few years ago.

The Brookings institution found that we had been saving much more money than was needed for new investment in private industry. Most of the saving was done by large corporations and by persons with incomes in excess of $10,000.

Savings Deplete Flow Of Income

THE ROOSEVELT Administration made an attempt to cut down the excess of savings by increasing taxes on very large incomes and by the undistributed earnings tax on corporations. The latter tax was in poor form when it was proposed, and still worse form as it was enacted. Last year it was all but completely repealed, and the President is still fighting to retain its last shreds.

So far the Roosevelt Administration does not seem to have made much progress in cutting down the percentage of the total national income which is saved. One reason may be that it has not yet put heavy enough taxes on incomes of from $10,000 to $50,000.

Savings deplete the flow of income unless they are promptly and effectively invested. They can be invested by private enterprise or by Government, or by the two in various kinds of combination.

Greater Volume Of Investment Needed

The President's speech skipped lightly over the problem of converting savings into investments. In fact, he spoke with some disparagement of those who are wrapped up in this problem. But his own best economists agree with most economists outside the Government that if the national income is to be lifted much above its present level there must be a greater volume of investment.

The President did not indicate that he has any specific ideas on this subject—or on the alternative of greatly reducing the accumulation of savings. He offered no new incentives to private enterprise. He offered no new encouragement to those who believe that a larger volume of savings must be invested by the Government, or through its active partnership with private interests.

For a more comprehensive and better co-ordinated economic program the country will have to wait a while longer.

Death Of A Poet

ERNST TOLLER was a poet, and he came of age in the twentieth century. It is almost the whole epitaph. Being a poet, he was afflicted—with nerves and with imagination. The poet's nerves are a sort of radio sending and receiving station; they quiver to waves which leave the stolid undisturbed. It is the joy and the agony of the poet to feel more than what happens to himself; to feel and respond to what happens to people he has never met, never seen, far away, nothing too far away.

It is the curse of his imagination to SEE—to see, though staring at a blank wall. To see forward and back, in the present, what was, and what is coming. When joy and peace are the routine of the times he is the most joyous, the most expansive; when conflict and violence are the routine, he is wounded a thousand times, and felled with a thousand blows.

If he is very great the blows temper him into a blade sharp enough to cut through all confusion. If he is very great, he becomes judgment when all judgment is suspended. Such a one was Dante.

Toller was not very great. But he was wholly poet.

HE WAS NOT great enough for the awful violence of the times in which he lived. Who is?

He looked upon the world with torn-open, incredulous eyes. They remained to the end incredulous eyes. They looked eagerly for beauty, serenity, dignity, justice, truth. What they saw appalled them. Toller was appalled to death.

There was the youth, hastening home from golden student days in France, hastening home to Germany to join his regiment, to fight Germany's war. He was a German and a Jew. In 1914 all German. In 1914 a European, educated and cultivated beyond the average, but, in the critical moment, a child of the soil that bred him. He was not in the war long. He was gravely wounded.

But he had seen the trenches—the mud and the barbed wire and the cold officer-bureaucracy barking at men about to die, and the comradeship, too, and the common wretched humanity.

Crippled behind the lines, he saw the war snatch the bread from the mouths of children—the bellies bloated with turnips; the women handing their own scrap of margarine across the table to the smallest one.

He saw what was before his eyes and what was not before his eyes—telegraphed to those sensitive nerve ends, beating on them intolerably.

Helped Organize Munitions Strike

PEACE! Peace with victory! Peace without victory! What was any longer victory or not victory in this shambles that the world had become, this blindness, stumbling and falling in its own excrement? To stop it—to stop it before it stumbled and fell for the last time!

His fatherland now was out there in the mud, and among the prisoners parading dully months on end, years on end, in the prison camps. His fatherland now was a race of men who spoke English and French and German, and cursed the war and prayed for peace.

So he helped organize the munitions strike. Some one had got to help stop this war.

The soldiers came home. There was revolution in the air. When soldiers come home from a long war there is always revolution in the air.

The revolution was a fantasy, a poet's fantasy—"shall we not shatter it to bits and then remold it near to the heart's desire!"

And what was the heart's desire? Brotherhood. The comradeship of the trenches, in the prosperity and serenity of peace. The sword into a ploughshare, the sharing of everything among everybody, the eternal dream.

ELOQUENCE is the poet's gift. Toller had a childlike radiance. The masses listened to him. But revolution is not a universal Easter. It is violence. Revolution is more war. There were soldiers—and soldiers. The guns turned in two directions. The officers were stronger. The poet and the war casualty was a traitor. He went to prison—for five years.

There are worse places, for a poet in the twentieth century, than prison. The world, perhaps, is worse. They put him in a madhouse first—perhaps he felt himself among the sane.

The prison walls were thick, there was solitude. Perhaps through so much stone the waves were spent. So he could write. He wrote about masses—about masses and men. His heart was with the revolt of the poor. His being recoiled from violence. He loved people, not masses. He was a sorry revolutionist—he had no power to hate.

His play, "Men in the Mass," came out from the prison walls and was played in many languages. He wrote poetry. He wrote of a war cripple. The play was too painful . . . the exacerbation of an open wound.

He came out of prison into the republic—which had imprisoned him—and into fame. The republic was careening merrily, with the ancient regime sulking and plotting, the trade union bureaucrats riding high, the Socialist ministers hobnobbing with aristocrats and profiteers, who flattered them to their faces and sneered behind their backs.

The parties of the left quarreled, quarreled interminably in dialectic dialogue; the night clubs thrived; over everything was the tinsel of borrowed money.

The poet enjoyed his fame.

But the nerve ends telegraphed: Bad news! Bad news! The open, ingenuous eyes clouded and were appalled.

The end of it was Hitler.

THIS WAS the pure volution, its very acme. It was conservatism wrapped in black and red, embracing its own death.

It was violence with "order" and "discipline" on its tongue. It had none of the yearning, infantile and argumentative cruel idealism of the leftists. It was not the revolution of the trenches. It was the organized revolution of the top sergeant.

It was not the anarchic street fighting of the bacarian rising. It fell into line; it marched; it heiled; its destruction was systematic. Nihilism ran wild in its heart, but outside it stood panoplied, serried, proclaiming an awful power. The mass was automatized. The nation was a tank.

The poets fled from that place. The world is dotted with the German poets. And Toller, of course, against the armored world. He was enemy No. 1. Curious. It is not—I wrote it IS not—it was not in him to hurt a fly.

The poet is a man of words. Words are his breath and his life. In them, and in them alone, is ease for his suffering and sublimation for his personal and vicarious pains.

Exile ripped the words out of his mouth. He was a man of words without a language. He was grateful to New York. He watched America wonderingly, admiring the great democracy.

Admired Sentiment Behind Lee Shrine

He WAS at the P. E. N. conference and visited the White House. That was a day of joy. "So ought great democracies to live," he said, looking at the big house, not too much bigger than its compatriots.

We visited Arlington and walked through the house of Lee. "He was on the other side in the Civil War," I explained. His eyes grew large with happiness. "And his home is a public monument? I had heard that, but I did not believe."

"We love him now," I said. "We think he was very greatly wrong."

"There are no special tombs for officers?" he asked. We were driving through the rows on rows of small white stones.

"If the family wanna put one up they can," the taxi driver explained. "But the country don't put up no special ones. After all, they all died the same, I guess they figger."

The poet looked at the cemetery. "It is very peaceful here," he said. "Peaceful and democratic."

THE WORDS would not come, in a strange country, to ease the pain. And the waves kept beating endlessly. . . . His mother . . . they broke into her home and tore his last letter from around her neck. She wore it as an amulet. Had he ever brought her luck? Mothers are strange.

They arrested his sister. In Czecho-Slovakia, his brother. His brother was a banker. He wore no letter as an amulet. The poet was a family disaster.

But who was his family? The last time I saw him his face was white. "They are sending 80 German war prisoners—Czechs and Germans and Austrians—back to Hitler from Spain," he said. "Can you not stop them?"

He had no money; no words, no country. "And I have come here when America has no more use for European culture," he said with clear awareness.

IF HE HAD DIED in Austria or Switzerland perhaps I should not have felt it so much. Only the poet's nerve ends receive the message with undiluted shock, from near or far. But it was just up the street where he hanged himself, in a New York hotel room. Why did no message come to me saying, "Telephone him!" Saying, "Ask him to come around . . . to come around and talk?"

They will say that Hitler killed him. That is true enough. But commend him not to hate, who had in him no steely power to hate.

His fate was to love the world and mankind, and most unhappily.

Their Majesties' American Itinerary

Wednesday, June 7:

The royal train will arrive at Niagara Falls. The King and Queen, now pretty exhausted, will look at the falls and envy the fellows who went over in barrels. A complete absence of barrels will convince them there is no escaping the ordeal that way. While still meditating they will be met by the welcoming committee. The expressions on both sides will register, "I don't see how they stand all this."

Thursday, June 8:

The King and Queen will arrive in Washington. Being monarchs, they will be denied even the extra hours sleep which comes through a train getting in two hours late. They will be met in the reception room of the Union Station by President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the rulers of two continents exchanging looks of deep compassion. Queen Elizabeth and Mrs. Roosevelt will make mental notes on each others hats and gowns.

Cabinet officers, Congressmen and Army and Navy officials and wives will be presented to the King and Queen. The wives will have rehearsed everything in advance, but will not trust entirely to luck. No matter what their husbands do, they will be criticized when they get home.

12 Noon—Arrival at White House. More presentations.

Dress—Of course.

2 p. m.—Sightseeing. Their Majesties will be shown the spot where the Democratic Party once stood, the famous battlefields in the wars between the New Deal and Business, the memorial to Private Enterprise and the Tomb of the Forgotten Taxpayer.

Dress—Rompers.

4 p. m.—Garden party at the British Embassy. The British Ambassador, having announced that no photographers will be admitted, except a few chosen ones who will be permitted a limited number of snapshots, the most exciting battle of the year between cameramen and Great Britain will ensue. The cameramen will win and make peace on their own terms. Their terms will be 200 or 300 more pictures, none quite fitting.

8 p. m.—State dinner at teh White House. Their Majesties will welcome it as at least a chance to sit down for a couple of hours.

Dress—Yes, indeed.

Friday, June 9:

Visit to the Capitol to meet Vice President Garner and members of the Senate and House with their wives and ladies.

Dress—Slightly chaotic, with marked touches of the old frontier days in American tailoring.

Saturday, June 10:

Formal reception in New York and visit to the World's Fair. This will prove whether the English feet can stand more than American feet, as well as giving some comparative idea of reaction to nerve strain. After this is over the King and Queen will be pretty close to a complete collapse.

Sunday, June 11:

11 p. m.—Return to Canada.

Summary of the entire trip by King George's exclamation to the Queen, "Boy, are my dogs sore!" and the reply of the Queen, "If England ever asks us to go through this again I'm through."

Texas Contributes Beauty and Size To World's Fair

New York, May 23.

THE GREAT STATE of Texas is always adding to its laurels in this town. Noted long for its oil, cattle, size and friendliness, the last few years have seen it add another star to its studded crown—the greatest incubator for lovely girls of all shapes and sizes in the Union. Many a model and a Hollywood darling and a decorative number in the amusement world has popped into the Nation's view recently.

Perhaps much of this is due to the roving, keen eye of Maestro Billy Rose, the showman, who operated there a couple of years ago. He may have discovered some of the Texan beauties, but he didn't invent them, for they are strictly a native product, and undoubtedly have always existed. The other day we welcomed back to New York one of the Lone Star State's most interesting young ladies—the same being Miss Lois De Free who stands 6 feet 2 inches in her sheer stockings, weighs 180 pounds, is a beautiful dark-haired creature, and who now is queen of the Amazons in that cultural exhibition at our fair, wherein sturdy young ladies fight with wooden swords, spar with spears and otherwise recreate the warlike pastimes of the Scythian sisters of old.

Lois has been a New York figure for some time. Once she was a bouncer in a night club here, and reaped acres of publicity. Later she married a midget in Florida for the same purpose—and had the marriage annulled a week later. But a short time ago she retired to Taylor, Tex., swearing off show business and its problems—only to be lured back to us by the queen role in the Amazon affair. And she's glad to be here, even though it entailed leaving her current heartthrob, a Texas oil gentleman she calls "Snooks." "I'm interested in the Amazon show on account of it's so educational" Lois said as we met her at the deppo. So welcome back, big girl. Personally, I'd hate to meet Lois with wooden swords, spears or even machine guns. As Hall says, she's a lot of girl.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—With Mr. Franchot the Tone out of the local picture, that other Hollywood refugee, Mr. Johnny Wahooooo Weismuller seems to be the big moment among many of the young ladies here. He is a headliner at Mr. Rose's water show at the fair, of course, and the sighs of the girls in the stands sometimes stir up a heavy surf in the pond. The mermaids of the show are not unmindful of his charms, either.

Two fine books, so different in design and treatment, are fighting tooth and toenail for best-seller preference here. They are "Grapes of Wrath," by John Steinbeck, and "Wickford Point," by J. P. Marquand. Such opposites—and such brilliant jobs. Another come on the list here is one called "Mein Kampf," by a new author named Hitler.

MY CLEVER COLLEAGUE, Inez Robb, is now on an exciting but wearing assignment, as you may know—traveling through Canada on the royal train. But where her majesty has 40 trunks of finery, Inez has two suitcases only—but they contain correct costumes for any emergency. That's the way to do it—travel light. It took me years to learn it, though.

While our lovely post-deb, Consuelo Villa, was giving an engagement party for her chum, Shelia Potter a bad man sneaked into the fashionable home and stole a whole mass of rich fur coats belonging to the guests. Some party, hey? Go in mink and return in a barrel sort of thing . . .

Only Good-Will Programs Allowed From U. S. Abroad

By the United Press.

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday ordered all radio stations broadcasting to foreign countries to transmit only programs "which will promote international good will" under penalty of losing their licenses.

International broadcasting stations were directed under the order to "render only an international broadcast service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international good will, understanding and co-operation."

Commission members would not comment for publication on the order, but vigorously denied that it constitutes censorship. It merely is designed, they said, to insure against violently partisan broadcasts which may affect the sensibilities of potential customers for American goods in foreign countries, particularly in South America.

The FCC today renewed the license of WHOM, Jersey City, N. J., which had been held up since last November because of complaints that the station transmitted an allegedly anti-Semitic program.

G. O. P. Protests Roosevelt Attack On Debt Drive

John Hamilton, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, which is sponsoring "National Debt Week," protested last night against President Roosevelt's characterization, in his Monday night address, of the observance, as "merchandising horror about the national debt."

"The only 'horror' that we have been circulating" Hamilton said in a statement, "consists of an application to the present situation of what he (President Roosevelt) repeatedly declared in 1932 and 1933.

"It was Mr. Roosevelt who first said that 'any Government, like any family, can for a year, spend a little more than it earns,' but that 'you and I know that a continuation of the habit means the poor house.'"

Million Cut In WPA Rolls Seen by Chief

By the Associated Press.

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, predicted today that further improvement in private business would enable the WPA to reduce its rolls from an average of 3,000,000 persons in the current fiscal year to an average of 2,000,000 next year.

He made this forecast to reporters after appearing before a House Appropriations sub-committee which is considering President Roosevelt's request for $1,500,000,000 to operate Federal work relief in the next 12-month period starting July 1.

Although some times in the past initial WPA appropriations have been insufficient to last a full year, the administrator declared the requested sum was intended to cover all of next year.

Well, Mrs. Pudgy, you must expect digs like that from friends who keep their figures.

Mrs. Slim had a "plump era," too, till she learned to avoid high-calory foods that make unlovely fat, to eat instead slimming, low-calory dishes.

Remarkable how swiftly you'd lose on a diet like hers, Mrs. Pudgy—as much as ten pounds in five weeks. And there'd be no starving. With a calory chart you just cleverly avoid such bulge-makers as you chose for lunch today.

A serving of pineapple and cheese salad with French dressing has 219 calories. A chocolate milk shake has 250, strawberry shortcake with wripped cream, 340.

Instead you pick a refreshing spring salad—of shredded lettuce, onion, watercress and reducer's dressing—and only 25 calories. A foamy milk shake has 90 calories, a half-cup of strawberries with a tablespoon of powdered sugar has 80.

Simple, you see, to cut calories to 1,200 a day and still get substantial meals with meats and desserts—the protective foods, too, such as fresh vegetables, fruits, eggs, milk.

In no time you begin to look slimmer, feel younger, more radiantly alive. Our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," gives tempting, low-calory menus for two weeks, three-day liquid diet to get you off to a good start. Has calory chart, recipes for reducer's dressing, foamy milk shake, low-calory desserts. Menus for gaining.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Another Harlan Coal Company Signs Union Pact

Harlan, Ky., May 23 (U.P.).—The Black Mountain Corporation, operating two soft coal mines at Kenvir, Ky., today signed a union-shop contract involving 1,150 men with the United Mine Workers of America. The miners are to return to work tomorrow morning.

Signing of the contract brings to 6,600 the number of Harlan County miners now working or ready to work under union-shop agreements, and was believed to foreshadow an early end to the contract deadlock which has closed half of the mines in this area.

The Black Mountain Corporation, however, is not a member of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association.

Woman Demands to Pay Taxes Year in Advance

Cumberland, Md., May 23 (AP).—Tax Collector James M. Conway has had a headache for weeks and weeks—Cumberland's tax collections are so slow they're nearly stationary.

So imagine his surprise today when Mrs. Irvin A. Sipe came and demanded she be allowed to pay her 1939-140 taxes in advance. The bills aren't even made up yet, but Conway took the money with due gratitude and a hope the idea will spread.

Interested in Gardens?

Foxhall Road Section

It is one of the many charming features of a thoughtfully planned home. Fine proportions and unusual stone walls create a dignity that is quietly impressive.

The keynote of the garden is privacy and restfulness. The garden atmosphere is brought inside through the use of attractively placed "picture" windows in the living and dining rooms.

Though built to attract a purchaser, it has that indefinable quality that is so patently characteristic of the homes that stand out in your memory.

Nothing that contributes to convenient and graceful living has been overlooked. We believe a visit will be well worth while if an unusually fine residence is of interest to you.

Wants $25,000 a Year

MRS. LEMMA HOLMES-SMITH,

Turkish woman who was once a wife in her cousin's harem and later married Carl Holmes, of the Fleischman yeast family, arrived in New York aboard the liner Queen Mary to press a suit in which she seeks to force Holmes to continue a settlement of $25,000 she says he made upon her rumors of gifts by the Maryland-Virginia association to District officials, and shouted:

"I represent the District, and I think it's only fair that Mr. Schulte name the officials or stop repeating the rumors," he said. "It's unfair to all District employes."

"I'll ask the question whenever I please," retorted Schulte, also growing red in the face.

Chairman Bates, soft-spoken Southerner, drawled that if Schulte had any names of officials who had been bribed he should furnish them to the committee.

After mumbling that if anybody wanted to start a fight he was ready, Schulte turned on Derrick again and demanded to know whether it was true that the producers' association intended to employ Seal as counsel following his resignation as corporation counsel.

When Derrick replied emphatically not, Seal jumped to his feet again and, pointing a shaking finger at Schulte, shouted:

"And you didn't force my resignation as your henchman, Mrs. Boyle, stated on the radio."

When Schulte replied that Mrs. John J. Boyle, jr., of consumers' counsel, was no henchman of his, Seal added: "Maybe you're her henchman."

Derrick, after a severe questioning by Schulte, shot a few darts on his own as he related how preparations had been made to trap the bootleggers of cream into Washington. He admitted calling upon the Commissioners for aid, but added: "I didn't know where the police were going. It's unfortunate they happened to land in Indiana."

Schulte questioned Derrick regarding the association's setup and developed the following facts:

That Derrick is paid $10,000 a year, that salaries of all association employes total $44,420 a year and that the organization has $500,000 in the bank, which is subject to repayment to producer-members after six years.

Questioned about a speech he made in Staunton, Va., Derrick denied that he had threatened to drive independent distributers in Washington out of business but stated he had said that the association stood ready to meet any competition by slashing prices.

"We can take it as long as anyone else," he said.

Derrick said he had no objection to placing the milk industry in a quasi-public utility status, as suggested by Dr. Frederic C. Howe, of the Agriculture Department. He stated that the association sold $7,000,000 worth of milk in Washington annually, and estimated that 6,000 to 8,000 gallons of bootleg cream are sold in the District daily.

Later in the day, under questioning of J. Edward Burroughs, committee counsel, Derrick stated that there are 1,170 producers in the non-profit-making co-operative association.

Schulte and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, clashed for the second time as the Indianan moved to the District Committee room for hearings on his bill. However, Smith, after protesting against the "unusual procedure," furnished a list of 39 producer members of the Maryland-Virginia association as witnesses against the Schulte bill

The farmers denounced the bill, but at the same time complained against the profits made by distributors. Schulte, who argued that all milk should be bought at a basic price from farmers, thus eliminating the surplus or lower price, encountered skepticism as to its practical operation.

Stating that the hearing will continue all day today and tomorrow, Schulte said consumers will be invited to testify tomorrow night, beginning at 8 o'clock.

"We want to be fair," he said. "We'll hear everybody."

Meanwhile, another clash within the Bates sub-committee appeared inevitable. Schulte and other Western members of the sub-committee announced their intention of demanding a recess at the end of the week for a week or ten days because of Memorial Day. Bates said he thought the hearings should continue, but admitted he probably will be overruled.

Bates agreed to a recess tomorrow, however, so as not to interfere with the outing of the District Bar Association.

First Lady Lauds Rural Conference

New York, May 23 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt today told more than 2,500 women observing "Rural Woman's Day" at the New York World's Fair that she looked forward to a meeting in London of rural women from many nations as "a progressive means of exchanging information and ideas."

A large delegation sails tomorrow for the fourth triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, May 30 to June 10, in London.

Mrs. Roosevelt described those intending to attend the conference as "representatives of real homes and the general interests of the people."

Your Figure, Madame!

Fruit Juices, Milk And Vegetables Lose Vitamins Easily

DO YOU SQUEEZE the family orange juice the night before, add soda to vegetables to keep them green, and drain off the water in which they are cooked? If so, you are following the precedent of many a good housewife, but you are destroying most of the minerals and vitamins.

With the daily discovery of new reasons why we need vitamins and minerals in optimum amounts, it seems to be increasingly important that these elements be saved from loss in cooking or from destruction in any way.

Orange juice that is allowed to stand overnight loses a good part of the vitamin C through oxidation. Tomato juice is similarly affected if left in an open container. Keep it tightly covered.

New Canning Method

Except in acids, such as in tomatoes, the addition of soda to vegetables greatly increases the rates of destruction of vitamin B. And since the vitamins B, C and G and the minerals calcium and phosphorus dissolve in water, these are lost when the water in which they are cooked is thrown away. Vegetables should be cooked quickly and in as little water as possible. The water that is drained off should be saved for stock in soup and broth.

The old-fashioned method of cooking fruits and vegetables in an open vessel preparatory to canning resulted in the loss of most of the vitamin C, but the new cold pack method and commercial canning process preserve both vitamins and minerals.

You may be astonished to know that when green vegetables are kept for a few days at room temperature they will lose as much as 50 per cent of their vitamin content. They retain their vitamins if kept at or below 30 degrees F.

In marketing, select the young vegetables. The young roots and leaves are richer in vitamin C than the older plants. And don't throw away the outer leaves of lettuce and cabbage; these green outer leaves are richest in vitamins.

Milk is so easily affected by warmth that if it is left on the doorstep in the sun for only half an hour it loses practically 100 per cent of its vitamin C. Even when kept in a cool place, milk loses from 20 to 30 per cent of the vitamin C content in 24 hours. Milk should be used up while fresh and not left in the ice box.

After going to the trouble to give your family the foods they need—fresh fruits and vegetables, whole milk, butter, cream, cheese, whole grain breads and cereals, and meat—take the further precaution of preventing loss of the vitamins and minerals before they reach the table.

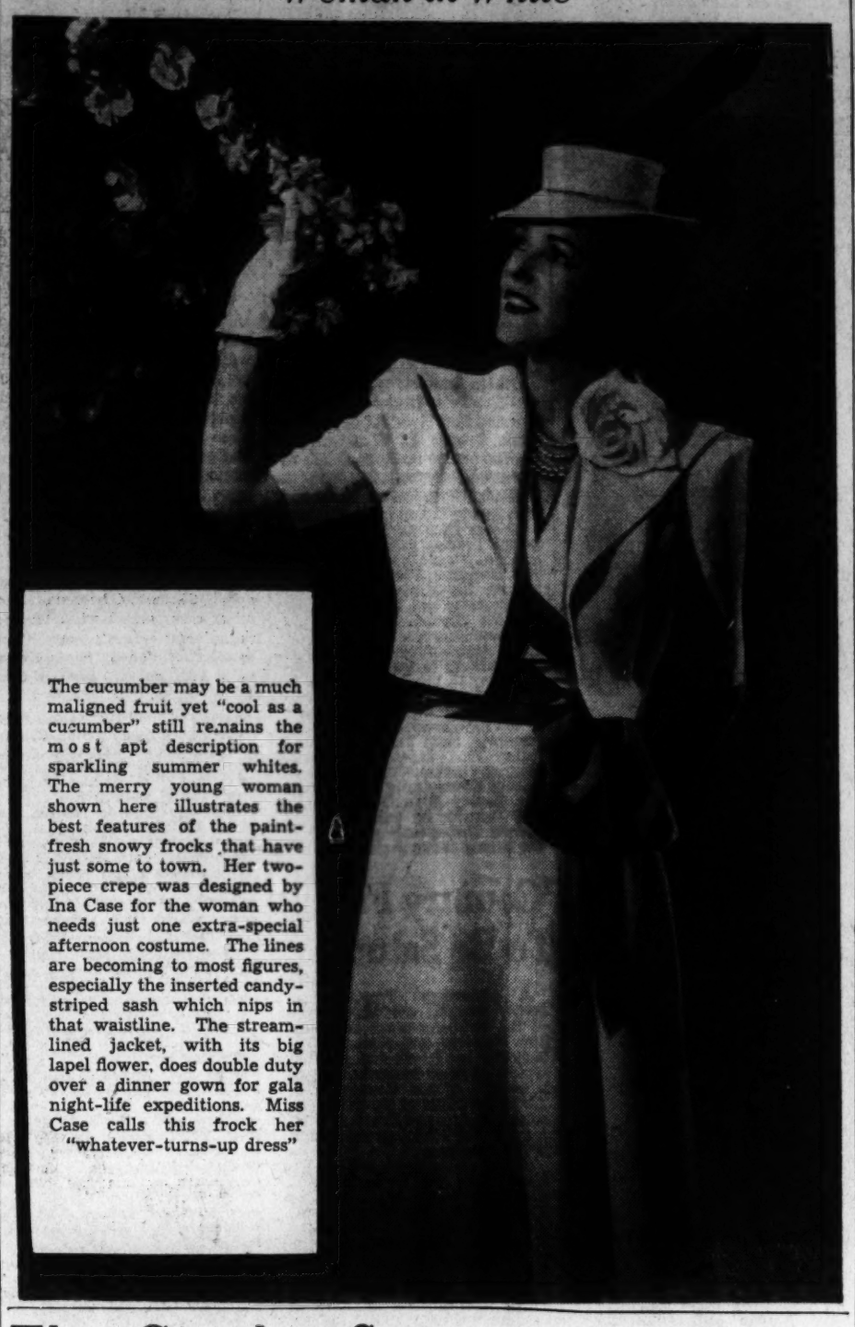
Woman in White



The cucumber may be a much maligned fruit yet "cool as a cucumber" still remains the most apt description for sparkling summer whites. The merry young woman shown here illustrates the best features of the paint-fresh snowy frocks that have just some to town. Her two-piece crepe was designed by Ina Case for the woman who needs just one extra-special afternoon costume. The lines are becoming to most figures, especially the inserted candy-striped sash which nips in that waistline. The streamlined jacket, with its big lapel flower, does double duty over a dinner gown for gala night-life expeditions. Miss Case calls this frock her "whatever-turns-up dress"

Seasoned Bachelor Discusses, in Reminiscent Vein, The Kind of Women Who Hold Their Men Friends

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your reply of May 19 to "Interested Reader" (who asks how the woman who lives alone in an apartment may keep her honor and also her men friends) will not help more than a small minority of your readers. But for this minority it is, I think, the best answer I have ever read in a personal-advice department. It brings back to a greying head pleasant memories of hostesses at parties for two; hostesses who were clever enough to work out for themselves the course you recommend, or variations.

I might call them "the girls who lived alone and liked me." Reminiscing anonymously, I can admit (without feeling smug, even) that these associations were a credit to the women, and, also, to me. Several are married today, and other are still living alone (more or less, as the case may be); but none, I am sure, from necessity. And I still like them. And they still like me—I believe.

In a fairly long and generally entertaining bachelorhood, I met—and later crossed off my list—more than one of the "how-dare-you-sir" type of woman, but none of them lingers in memory. Often, after playing host in the early part of the evening, I was a guest of the lady "after 9 p. m.," and had no hesitancy in accepting an invitation to cross the girl's threshold, nor even of inviting myself in. But I was modest enough, I believe, to avoid "the good old charitable offer" approach; and advanced, if at all, rather along the "mutual aid society" avenue.

And, believe it or not, whether I "got the air," or "didn't get to first base," it was not an occasion for "dropping" the lady or for being dropped by her, in most instances. I thoroughly enjoyed the finesse, diplomacy, tact and good sportsmanship used in standing me off, or easing me out, without damage to friendship. And there was always the thought that the "mutual aid society" might prosper at another meeting. Sometimes it never did. All right, I still liked the girls who consistently shooed me out by any one of half a dozen techniques that did not hint of outrage. Your advice is very much to the point—for those who can take it.

But I think you go off the track in the last paragraph. To be specific, when you suggest that "the average woman is disappointed in the man who solicits her favors." As I see it, your reply in its entirety is not directed at the average woman, but to the rare and exceptional woman who is clever enough to carry out your advice; the woman who is a good sport and delightful companion, and who knows us men folks well enough to know that we think her favors are worth soliciting. I question whether this type of woman would be complimented if denied opportunity to decide for herself how the relationship was to proceed.

And with all due respect to your implied conviction that the best way to guarantee continued friendship is to "keep the record straight," I submit that "devoted friendship" may, in some exceptional cases, persist even after the adjournment sine die of an off-the-record relationship. I have no regrets, and many pleasant memories, as I review the record in my case. And I have reason to believe that the same is true of those women I learned to know best. On the other hand, in this May-time of retrospection, I shouldn't wonder if some of those who evaded the issue aren't also wondering—IF— ALSO INTERESTED.

Advice for 'Pat P.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: With reference to the case of poor little 16-year-old "Pat P." (your correspondent of May 18, who is expecting a child out of wedlock) I wish to say that I concur in your advice, as far as it goes; but I do think that she ought to tell the boy about her condition. Even though it was an accident, the child is his, and he has a right to have something to say as to what shall become of it. And he might surprise her by becoming a "tower of strength" when he realizes her predicament. Responsibility has often made a man of a wayward boy. COLLEGE BOY.

Attention: 'Perplexed'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I think "Perplexed" (your correspondent of May 16, who is madly in love with a young physician who says he will never love her)—has a fair chance to win his heart. Every successful woman must be a good actress, and this is a good opportunity for "Perplexed" to train herself along that line. If the relationship between the two has been open and aboveboard so far, she should bring her emotions absolutely under control and proceed on the basis of friendship.

She should have dates with other men and be impartial in her show of interest. Men like and admire women who are cheerful, healthy and emotionally stable, and dislike the neurotics who are always needing pills. I would say that the physician is afraid of a repetition of his former unhappy love affair, and that he shies away from all that pertains to love. If "Perplexed" eliminates all mention of "love" from her conversation with him, he is very apt to be making love to her before long. Nothing kills a man's love so quickly as a woman's possessive attitude; while uncertainty as to her attitude stimulates interest. Very sincerely, EXPERIENCED.

Subdebs Favor 2-Piece Dresses

Hollywood, Calif.—Two pieces to every dress is the fashion byword of Bonita Granville and other Hollywood sub-debs. While their elders pursue the shirtwaist mode, the juniors also have discovered it doubles the number of of their wardrobe changes.

When a girl wants the effect of a one-piece dress she merely puts together a matching skirt and blouse. Later each piece goes into other combinations.

Today's Health Talk

Human Guinea Pig Status Is Discarded By Progressive High School Students

I salute the class of 1938 of the University High School of the Ohio State University. They have produced a yearbook which departs from the ordinary stereotyped class yearbook, in that instead of photographs of smug groups of fraternities and sororities, they have made a serious attempt to evaluate themselves and their education.

It is called "Were We Guinea Pigs?" It was written in answer to a sneer they often heard during their high school course, "You are the guinea pigs of progressive theories of education."

They describe their background, what kind of people their parents are—conservative (57½ per cent), liberal (22½ per cent, between conservative and liberal (12½ per cent), and radical (7½ per cent). Politicians might take notice; I believe that this is a very fair average of American opinion. The incomes of the parents were mostly from $4,000 to $6,000 a year. Thirty-five per cent of the class did not know what their parents' incomes were.

School Experience

Then they go on to describe their school experience in learning to use language, and in expression through art, with mathematics in their daily life, with putting their minds in order, with health and sports, with governing themselves. It's certainly a well-rounded experience.

They think they have profited by it and they don't want to be guinea pigs.

Well, thank God for that, say I.

No, my dears, you happen to have assumed species character of a different order—you are Homo; I don't subscribe entirely to the sapiens part. Homo is pretty illogical, and certainly not docile and obedient and experimentable like guinea pigs.

Control Humans

Every once in a while some biologist enthusiast blossoms forth with the idea that Utopia could be created if only we could control men and women as we do domestic animals. We could select their parentage and breed them so that we could eliminate all the hereditary disease taints, and make a strong, intellectual, well-disciplined race, some destined to forge the anchors, some to spin the gossamer.

We would inoculate them against all the infectious diseases early in life, without any protest from minority groups. And then we would train them for the work each had to do for the state.

It all sounds fine, but then we wouldn't be Homos at all. No, let's not be guinea pigs. Guinea pigs have no hot, tempestuous fires sweeping across their placid lives. They never drafted a bill of rights, never protested the arrogance of authority. No guinea pig ever wrote an "Ode on a Grecian Urn," or longed to "sail beyond the sunset and the stars." This curious compound clay, man, did all that.

Quick Supper Hint

For a supper superlative when time is short, pour mushroom soup over canned tuna, sprinkle with a mixture of crumbs and grated cheese and bake until hot.

Mme. Horinouchi Gives Reception, First Big Party Since Her Arrival

Capital Society Turns Out for Function Arranged by Wife of Japanese Ambassador; Hostess Wears Chiffon Frock of Blue

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

"WELL, THE JAPANESE slated to meet Their Britannic Majesties certainly don't need any lessons in bowing," observed a guest yesterday at the mammoth reception given by Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador.

On all sides, there were members of the Embassy staff bowing to guests and to each other . . . sometimes once, sometimes twice . . . bowing, and bowing again, with true Oriental courtesy. One slim, kimona-clad woman approached a kimona-clad man and bowed five times, paying tribute to his attainments as an educator, a philosopher, and an authority on Chinese (yes, Chinese) classics. A center of much attention, the man in question is Mr. Yasuoka, of Tokyo, who is here for a brief visit on his way home from Europe.

THE FIRST BIG PARTY at which Mme. Horinouchi has entertained since she and her husband arrived in Washington, yesterday's event drew Capital residents in droves. And the huge company stayed on, and on, to enjoy the terrace that looks out over a green expanse, and the cool garden where convenient tables and chairs were placed.

Wearing a chiffon frock of delphinium blue, made on simple lines, with a sash of matching velvet ribbon and pearl clips at the neckline, Mme. Horinouchi was a pretty picture as she received the long line of guests.

MRS. LAWRENCE TOWNSEND, who is just back from a vacation sojourn in Florida and a short visit in New York, was one in the crowd who stopped in front of the hostess for more than a "How do you do." It seems the Capital's leading impresario has heard much of Mme. Horinouchi's talent as a pianist and wanted to know if she was continuing her musical interests in the midst of Washington's hectic round. She is.

From the drawing room, guests poured into the dining room, where a long table was lavishly laden with cold ham, turkey, salad, sandwiches and cakes. The huge bouquet of yellow and white iris rising from the center was one of the loveliest decorative notes I have seen this season. Obviously arranged by an artist, they had an artless, fragile appearance as if swayed by a faint breeze.

CHAMPAGNE PUNCH was served at a long table lining one end of the room, also on the terrace, where most of the crowd collected and lingered. Even more inviting, however, was the shaded garden around the corner, discovered by comparatively few of the guests.

The company represented a sizable section of the Diplomatic Corps, the Army and Navy sets, and residential Washington, as well as a generous number from the Congressional contingent, and a scattering of guests from other official circles.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, whose day had already been crammed with engagements, was among those arriving during the first half of the party. Earlier she had been feted at a luncheon given by Mrs. Finis J. Garrett and then had gone on to call on the President of Nicaragua and Senora de Somoza, who will leave Washington today.

IN THE DINING ROOM: Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wearing a trim navy and white ensemble, being greeted right and left, and chatting about the forthcoming visit of Norway's Crown Prince and Crown Princess . . . Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, with their daughter, Miss Patricia Grady, who recently came to Washington from the University of California, where she has been studying . . . Mrs. Peyton March threading her way through the crowd, accompanied by Mrs. Robert B. Chiperfield . . . Gen. Dion Williams discussing the visit of Their Majesties and repeating the rumor that one bachelor Representative invited to the garden party received a card for his wife and, not having one, immediately went out and got married!

ON THE TERRACE: Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, and Mrs. William D. Leahy, all dressed in cool summer prints, seen making their way through the throng . . . Senator Joseph Guffey, accompanied by the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, holding a little court of their own at a table . . . Mme. Emanuel Lombard, looking as pretty as usual and as usual surrounded by friends . . . Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, chatting with Mrs. Thomas Burke. About what? Ten to one it was music, since that's an absorbing interest of both . . . The popular Minister of Rumania, Radu Irimescu, making his way to the garden . . . The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, trimly turned out in summer white.

GARDEN GLIMPSES: Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, greeting friends at every table . . . Clarence Hewes and the Minister of Portugal, a reminiscing twosome, recalling some of their experiences when both were stationed in the Orient . . . the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, popular centers of attention . . . Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, stopping in the cool shade for a brief bit of talk with friends . . . Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris collecting a group around their table that included Col. and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby and Gen. Charles Burnett . . . Frau Thomsen, in a lovely mauve and burgundy frock, sitting at a table with Frau von Boetticher and one or two others.

OTHERS THERE: The Ambassador of Brazil and Senora de Martins, the Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis, the Lithuanian Minister and Mme. Zadeikis, the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Jose Baron; Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, walking through the garden with Mrs. Eldon King; Mrs. William Mark Conrad, the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mme. Bianchi, in an attractive navy blue and white ensemble; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Senora de Guimaraes, Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr., arriving with a couple of other Congressional hostesses; Col. and Mrs. Brady G. Ruttencutter, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, and so on . . . through the Diplomatic blue book, the social register, the Army and Navy roster, and a few pages from the Congressional Directory.

'Country Fair' To Be Saturday

A picturesque Pan-American booth, presided over by women of the Latin-American embassies and legations and featuring the beautiful handwork and gay arts typical of these countries, will be a feature of the Country Fair, which the Guild of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts is holding on the school grounds Saturday afternoon.

Three women from the French Embassy, Mme. Benech, wife of the Naval Attache; Mme. Weiser, wife of the Air Attache, and Countess de Gramont, wife of the Attache, will assist Countess van der Straten, Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, who is sponsoring the tea. A group of young girls among them the Misses Sylvia Alexander, Elizabeth Langlais, Marie Therese Houser, Sally Milne and Nancy Callahan, will serve.

Elizabeth Arden has donated one of her beautiful leather make-up cases for the opportunity booth over which Mrs. Frank L. Slingluff, jr., will preside and, in addition, is sending an artist who will make sketches of "matrons and maidens" as they are and as they may look with last-minute coiffures.

In secluded nooks three fortune tellers, Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Baroness Irene Ungern and Mrs. Malcolm Johnson will predict the future for guests.

About The Town

Emlen Davies to Wear a Tricky Tiara With Wedding Costume, Is Rumor

EMLEN DAVIES isn't telling anybody about her wedding gown and the costumes her attendants will wear at her marriage on Saturday to Robert Grosjean. But via the grapevine comes word that Ambassador Joseph Davies has given his daughter a magnificent diamond tiara of unusually fine workmanship, which can be taken apart to form all manner of clips, brooches, earrings and hair ornaments. It's said that she will wear this on her wedding day.

AT A recent party the hostess asked Thomas Corcoran if he didn't care to chat with some of the young ladies present. "No thanks," he replied, "young ladies can't talk about anything that matters."

THE FOLLOWING is intended neither as a crack at the British Embassy nor as a sign of "social frustration," but is simply an observation. Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. George Barnet, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Vera Bloom and Miss Stellita Stapleton, all Washington residents who have been presented at court, are not invited to the British garden party. Miss Bloom and Miss Stapleton, of course, have the misfortune to come under the category of "daughters."

When somebody asked Catholic Mrs. John R. Williams if she would curtsy to royalty, she replied, "No, I think I'll genuflect."

PRINCESS GAETANI, the fascinating Italian lady who makes cloth out of milk by a secret process she's invented, will give a dinner dance on Monday evening in New York for several members of the Italian Embassy staff. The Counselor and Signora Cosmelli, the Secretary and Countess Roberti and Marquis Capomazza and his wife will go up for it. They will also tour the fair, where Princess Gaetani's products are on view in the Italian pavilion.

EVEN THE British Ambassador and Lady Lindsay are sending up no more fervent prayers to the Deity for clear weather on June 8 than is Mrs. Jouett Shouse for June 3, when Wolf Trap Farm will be the scene of an outdoor benefit for the Women's Institute of Professional Relations. When you ask Mrs. Shouse what will happen in case of rain that evening, she simply replies grimly "It won't rain." Others who have been asked to the British garden party agree with her, maintaining pessimistically that the heavens are waiting until June 8 really to open up.

Mrs. Shouse is lining up the cream of local talent for her party. Arthur Krock will barge around with a loudspeaked attachment to interview people, a la the curbstone queries conducted by newspapers. "Chip" Robert will act as master of ceremonies, and Mrs. Robert will give some of her imitations.

"TAXI DANCERS," a group of pretty ladies under the direction of Mme. Edgar Prochnik, will follow the Roselands technique of selling dance at a dime apiece on two platforms to be loaned by the Cuban Embassy, and used at their outdoor parties. The ladies include Suzanne Masten, Patricia Prochnik, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, Mrs. Millard West, Mrs. Jean de Sibour, Mrs. Mondell Gregg and Mrs. W. P. MacCracken. Mme. Prochnik has called a meeting of the group at her house on Monday afternoon at 3:30.

Since Mrs. Shouse must know in advance how many people are coming, in order to provide enough supper, tickets are being obtained ahead of time instead of at the door.

CONCERNING parties et al: The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau will give a dinner on Thursday evening, June 1 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Glover will have a small one tonight, and Mrs. Hare Lippincott will be hostess at dinner on Saturday . . . Mrs. Higginson Rogers has invitations out for the evening of June 3 . . . Mrs. George T. Summerlin has bought a house on Massachusetts avenue, just off Sheridan Circle. She now lives at 1302 Eighteenth street, an apartment house.

Priscilla Weld To Marry

He will be best man at the wedding.

Miss Weld is a granddaughter of the late Gen. Stephen Minot Weld, of Dedham, Mass., and of Mrs. William Barclay Parsons and the late Gen. Parsons, of New York. She is a sister of Mrs. Albert S. Bigelow, of Rockland County, N. Y., and of Mrs. William T. Fleming, of Pocopson, Pa. The prospective bride attended La Pelouse Bex les Bains in Switzerland and the Foxcroft School. She is a member of the Vincent Club of Boston.

Mr. Grosjean's mother is the former Miss Mabel Lahr, daughter of Mrs. Adolph P. Lahr, of Evansville, Ind., and the late Mr. Lahr.

The party will take place at the Glover home, 4200 Massachusetts avenue, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

Earlier that week, Miss Glover will receive her diploma from St. Timothy's School at Catonsville Md. She attended Cathedral School here before entering St. Timothy's.

Following her debut whirl here, Miss Glover will go to Children's Island, near Marblehead, Mass., where she will spend a month helping to care for the colony of crippled youngsters there.

Dance Planned

A dance for daughters and sons of members of the Congressional Club will take place on Friday evening at the Congressional Club from 8 to 12 o'clock. The United States Marine Band will play.

Ex-Colleagues Honor Meekses

Former Representative and Mrs. James A. Meeks, of Illinois, who returned to Washington a short time ago for the spring season, were honored at an informal reception and buffet supper last evening. The party was given by a group of their neighbors at the Wardman Park Hotel, where they made their home during his tenure in office and where they are now occupying an apartment temporarily.

Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, wife of Representative Maloney, of Louisiana, was hostess and presented Mrs. Meeks with an orchid corsage, a gift from the assembled guests. During the evening there were games of all sorts, including bridge and anagrams.

Among those present were Representative and Mrs. Laurence F. Arnold, Representative and Mrs. Paul Brown, Representative and Mrs. Alfred L. Bulwinkle, Representative and Mrs. Edward E. Cox, Represetative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Representative and Mrs. Fritz G. Lanham and Representative and Mrs. Donald H. McLean.

Vinson, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Vinson; Harllee Branch, vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Mrs. Branch, and Kenneth Romney, sergeant at arms of the House of Representatives, and Mrs. Romney.

Widely known in Washington, Miss Boyd came here for a brief stay in March when she was guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Women's National Press Club.

Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club Continues Tour of Hunt Country Estates Today

STARTING at 10 o'clock this morning the Fauquier and Loudon Garden Club will continue the second day of its two-day tour of estates in and around the hunt country. Oatlands, in Leesburg, the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis will again be on the program of places on the tour. It has arched walks of tree box leading tunnel-like down a flight of old stone steps to a further panorama of garden vistas and is to my mind the loveliest garden in Virginia.

FROM THERE you may go on toward Middleburg to stop at Stoke, built by the late Mrs. Floyd Harris, and now kept up to pink of perfection by her daughter, Miss Martha Harris. At Foxcroft there is a garden in full bloom, first planted by Miss Charlotte Noland about 20 years ago.

Also open near Middleburg are the gardens of Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, Mrs. Thomas Davis, Miss Julia Whiting and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morison's place, Welbourne, the famous old Dulany estate.

NEAR UPPERVILLE, you can see Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard's garden and Mrs. H. Rozier Dulany's Oakley. At The Plains is open Gordonsville, the home of Mrs. Reginald Vickers, with its tree box hedges. Others at The Plains are the gardens of Mrs. John Cochran and Mrs. William Slaughter. Then at Delaplane, is Oak Hill, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Alvin V. Baird, and formerly the home of Chief Justice John Marshall.

PETS WILL BE judged on their "personality" at the pet show which will be one of the features of the Gymkhana races to be given at Stuyvesant Horse Show Grounds on May 27. Mrs. William Street is chairman for the event which is for the benefit of the Fauquier County Tuberculosis Association. Judging the pets will be Mrs. Emmons Smith and Griffeth Warfield, of Washington, and Mrs. John Hinckley, of Warrenton. An amusing mule race is being arranged by Kenneth Jenkins and Tommy Leiter.

TWO CLASSES for horsemanship will be judged by Turner Wiltshire and Robert Young; Mrs. Delancey Nicoll and Mrs. Robert Young have charge of the sand pile where the youngsters will dig for treasure; and Ben Cain will be ringmaster.

Miss Heinig Speaks To District Educators

Originator Australian Preschool System Is Honored at Tea by Dr. Davis And Miss Lilla Whitcomb Davis

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Adventures in Education" might well have been the title of the talk by Miss Christine M. Heinig yesterday afternoon, at the tea given in her honor by Dr. Mary Dabney Davis, of the Office of Education, and Miss Lilla Whitcomb Davis, at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women. Miss Heinig, educational director of the Australian Association for Preschool Child Development, is here for a few days as a guest at the Davis home.

She spent two years here organizing the nursery school of the Research Center in Child Development, established under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. From here she went to Teachers' College of Columbia University, to have charge of the nursery school in the Child Development Institute, and in January two years ago sailed for Australia to take a position as principal of the Kindergarten Training College of Melbourne for a year.

When a coronation grant was offered by the government for a child welfare plan, hers, worked out with three associates, was assigned. The general director of health, seeing its far-reaching effect in improving the physical and mental well-being of the nation, amplified it into a five-year program for preschool children, and she has been made director.

Wears Gown in Sunset Colors

It was hard to conceive of this slight, enthusiastic young woman as bearing the responsibility of such a Government project. She received with the hostesses, wearing a floor-length gown with a demure, high-necked navy blue sheer blouse and a small round hat of the same material. The skirt, held out with a hoop, was as gay as a gypsy's with all the vivid colors of a Western sunset combined in its soft folds. Dr. Davis wore a redingote gown of brown net, embroidered with an all-over pattern of white, and a broad-brimmed straw hat of corresponding shade. Miss Davis wore a navy blue frock embroidered with a flower design and a blue hat.

Guests were served tea and sherbet as they arrived, and later were seated in the clubhouse lounge to hear Miss Heinig's talk and see motion pictures of Australia. She showed films produced and loaned by the Australian National Travel Association, one of the famous lyre bird and the other of the Koala bear, one of the country's favorite animals, which is like a teddy bear come to life. The title of the latter picture was "The Teddy Bears' Picnic" and it had all the charm of a visit to toyland. Tomorrow she will speak at the auditorium of the Interior Department, showing films dealing with her work there. By request, she will also include the teddy bear picture, which had not been shown before in this country.

To Talk at Johns Hopkins

Miss Heinig also is scheduled to speak at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and Saturwill leave for Detroit and go from there to her home in Winnetka, Ill. She expects to return to Australia in September.

The hostesses were assisted by Miss Mary E. Leeper, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mrs. Herbert Anderson, Miss Margaret LaFetra, Mrs. William C. Mayforth, Mrs. John Lanney Stewart, jr., Mrs. Frank C. Houdelette, Miss Jean Cameron, Miss Ida E. Steger, Miss Art Brown, Dr. Bess Goodykoontz, Miss Mary Edith Coulson, Mrs. Robert Oleson, Mrs. George Haviland Cox, Mrs. John Heiney, Mrs. Rowena Schmidt Carpenter and Miss Lucia Cates.

Among the guests were Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education; Dr. J. Kelly, head of the higher education division, Mrs. Kelly, Dr. James F. Abel, head of the division of comparative education; W. S. Deffenbaugh, chief of the American School division; Dr. George F. Zook, of the American Council of Education, and Mrs. Zook; Miss Helen W. Atwater, of the American Home Economics Association; Miss Edna P. Amidon, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Dean James H. Fox, Miss Anna Halberg, of Wilson Teachers' College; Mr. and Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Canham, Mrs. Dorothy Hulsizer, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Rogers.

Preschool Council Members Attend

Mrs. Olesen, who assisted, is president of the local branch of the A. A. U. W. and also of the Advisory Council on Preschool Education in the District; others of the council were Miss Edna McNaughton and Miss Mary Edith Coulson.

There were also several of the First Parents' Association, composed of the 10 or 12 parents whose children attended the nursery school of the Child Research Center. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Art Brown, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Cleveland, Mrs. Preston Kavanaugh and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher.

Bryn Mawr Club Entertains for Dean Manning

Campus problems, including the puzzling "turnover in majors," were discussed yesterday before members of the Bryn Mawr Club by Dean Helen Taft Manning, who was honor guest at a meeting at the home of Mrs. E. K. Morris, 4950 Hillbrook lane. Following her talk there was an election of officers of the club, with Miss Frances Carter succeeding Mrs. James Rowe as president.

The ups and downs in the popularity of major subjects may be partly explained by the interesting courses offered by preparatory schools which lead students to follow the subject through, said Dean Manning. At present, the natural sciences are in vogue. A new professor who approaches a subject from an unusual angle may be responsible for the popularity of a major, but both those reputed to be snap courses and very hard ones are avoided. Foreign languages are in disfavor now, especially Greek and Latin, she said, but English and philosophy are at a peak of popularity.

Faculty members are developing a link between the courses, she said. Art, an elective, for instance, being linked with the history of art. Louise Herron, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Herron, former residents of Washington, is being graduated this spring with a major in German and music.

Next year a course on the Eighteenth Century will be offered, said Dean Manning, combining philosophy, economics, history, and literature. Eight girls have already signed up for it.

She told of a scholarship provided by undergraduates on which a German Jewish refugee is attending Bryn Mawr and doing outstanding work. She had been doing domestic work in Brooklyn and is the daughter of a professor of history formerly of high standing in Germany. There are also two graduate students who are refugees.

Tea was served after the meeting. Mrs. Morris' cousin, Mrs. James L. Karrick and Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant, poured.

New officers elected to serve with Miss Carter next year include Miss Alice Lee Parker, vice president and treasurer; Miss Eleanor Lee Peirce, secretary.

P.-T. A. Renews Transfer Fight

The D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, over the signature of its new president, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, and with the approval of its counsel, S. Jay McCathran, jr., has sent out letters renewing its protest against proposed transfer of headquarters of the national congress from here to Chicago. The letters have gone to the national president, Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, members of the national executive board and to State presidents.

The protest is based on the fact that the resolution by which the national congress in its recent convention purported to convey authirty for the move was passed by a vote of 275 to 213 instead of by a two-thirds majority of those present and voting, as the protest alleges is required in the by-laws.

The fact that the presiding officer "ruled erroneously on the motion made to report said matter of transfer to a special committee for further study and report to the 1940 convention" also is cited.

The letter also calls attention to the fact that the national organization will forfeit the $10,000 trust fund for a national headquarters if the location is moved from Washington. The fund will go to George Washington University if the congress does not use it.

1 More Day Of Hearings On Budget

Senators 'Probably' To Report D. C. Estimates Next Week, Says Overton

After another day of testimony from civic leaders the Senate subcommittee in charge of District appropriations will begin to "mark up" the 1940 budget, probably reporting it out next week, Senator Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, said last night.

A score of witnesses appeared before the sub-committee yesterday urging increases for relief, schools, libraries, safety education, and salaries of District employes.

Only Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, asked that the budget total be kept at around $47,000,000 as recommended by the House. He suggested that the amount recommended for the National Training School for Girls be cut below the $365 per inmate approved by the House.

Auto Safety Funds Asked

Mrs. George T. Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee, and Washington I. Cleveland, director of the Washington Chapter of the American Automobile Association, asked an appropriation to pay salaries of driving instructors in public schools.

They also suggested that streetcar loading platforms should be paid for out of the highway fund, a suggestion concurred in by witnesses from the Keystone Automobile Club, who in addition urged adequate provisions for playgrounds as a safety factor.

Dr. Arthur O. Waller, of the U Street Neighborhood Council, stressed the need for a health center in that vicinity.

More Relief Sought

Mrs. Grace S. Lowry, of the Society of Friends, appearing in the afternoon, and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle in the morning, asked provision for relief clients to get more than $48 per month when larger amounts were seen to be necessary. Mrs. Coyle said $1,000,000 was needed for unemployables in the District and $1,500,000 for relief of the unemployed employables. She was representing the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, of the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, asked that the relief "ceiling" be boosted to $60 a month and urged additional case workers.

Bigger Salaries Desired

Dr. William J. Tompkins, recorder of deeds, asked salary step-ups for employes in his department, and Edward G. Brown, of United Government Employes, Inc., asked step-ups for numerous employe groups in the lower brackets.

Others who appeared included Mrs. Charles McCarthy, of the Metropolis View Citizens Association; Ernest H. Pullman, of Manor Park Citizens; Mrs. B. G. McElwee; Harold G. Clay, of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens; Mrs. E. M. Nelson, of the Burroughs Parent-Teacher Association; Theodore G. Parkman, of the D. C. Vocational Association; Mrs. T. B. Smith and Mrs. Richard Hogue, of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Household Projects of the WPA; Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, of the Women's City Club; Marvin M. McLean, of Brookland Citizens, and Dr. George Ruhland, city health officer.

Citizens Protest Slash in Fire Appropriation

Hampshire Heights Group Host to 300 Boys at Session

The Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night protested against the $56,000 cut in the appropriation for the fire department in the District supply bill.

More than 300 boys joined with the group in a "Boys Night" meeting in the Barnard School. Superintendent of Police Maj. Ernest W. Brown gave an illustrated talk on the Metropolitan Police Boys Club camp.

Southeast Citizens

Although only 15 replies had been received from 37 letters sent to members of the House and Senate District committees and the District Commissioners, the association felt that at least some good had been done by their action.

A committee was appointed to investigate proposed new Health Department regulations governing the keeping of fowls, especially pigeons. The group approved the proposal in principle.

Exploring Enthusiasts Hear About Penguins, See Snakes

Rattlers Displayed in Contempt of Bite; Why Antarctic Birds Catch Pneumonia In U. S. Revealed; Reindeer Trek Described

Snakes were on parade last night at the annual "Wild Life Night" of the American Explorers Club.

Speaking to 62 exploring and wild life enthusiasts—military, civil and congressional—at the University Club, Paxson C. Hayes, herpetologist and ethnologist, told how the bite of a rattlesnake is no longer to be feared and whipped live rattlers out of a glass cage to prove his point.

Lieut. Comdr. Robert English, who commanded the "Bear of Oakland" on the second Byrd Antarctic expedition, told of his experiences with penguins and Carl Lomen, president of the Alaska Reindeer Herd, described a trek across Alaska and Canada with 3,000 reindeer.

Lomen told how only 10 per cent of his original reindeer arrived at their Canadian destinations after traveling across three mountain ranges in unknown Arctic country. The trip was halted as the native Eskimo drivers "struck" until their wives could join the pilgrimage.

Lieut. Comdr. English explained why the pengins the Byrd expedition picked up in 80 below zero Antarctica died of pneumonia in the temperate United States. Dust, which is absent from the polar air, caused the illness, he said.

Representative Buck (Democrat), of California, declared education of American youth in conservation of wild life vital to the preservation of game, fish and fowl.

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, outlined tthe cause of the sinking of the submarine Squalus and declared the chances of rescue are a "long way from hopeless."

Speaker Urges Better Bible Instruction

Pennsylvania Sabbath School Official Criticizes Teaching Methods

Ineffectiveness of present adult Bible class teaching methods were scored here last night by Arthur R. Bodner, director of adult work in the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, speaking at Hamline Methodist Church.

"Telling is not necessarily teaching and listening is not necessarily learning," he said at the central committee meeting of the Organized Bible Class Association, stressing that students must have a "vital experience" of Jesus.

Discussing the Sunday School situation in Pennsylvania, where he said the church schools lost 55,000 students last year, most of them between 18 and 30, Bodner contended that the main reason was "We never really had them."

He expressed the opinion that there are many people in the churches and Sunday schools who don't realize the significance of being "children of God." It really means, he added, commitment of your life and your way to Jesus and His way.

While not minimizing the importance of fellowship in Bible class work, Bodner criticized classes which "develop into second-rate lodge sessions." Study is the principle thing, and attendance is secondary, he pointed out.

However, coupled with Bodner's criticism were some suggestions on improved class methods, in which he urged the teachers to first build a good background on the topic, then discuss practical application, and, finally, get classmen to carry out the application in their daily living.

Rome A. Betts, of the American Bible Society, New York, also spoke on the program, over which Page McK. Etchison, president of the Organized Bible Class Association, presided. William R. Schmucker presented his treasurer's report.

George E. Harris, executive secretary of the association; Howard Stackhouse, a vice president; Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the D. C. Sunday School Association, and others were guests.

U. S. Housing Like Relief, Ihlder Says

Government Must Provide Homes for Those Unable to Pay, He Declares

Decent housing is "one of the necessities of life the Government must provide those unable to pay for it," John Ihlder, executive director of the Alley Dwelling Authority, asserted last night.

The program of public housing agencies, he emphasized, "is decidedly supplementary to that of privately financed housing, just as relief is supplementary to wages paid by private enterprise."

First task of the ADA is slum reclamation, he said. "We can never assure an adequate supply of decent housing as long as slums stand and are occupied."

Interest an Obstacle

The agency recognizes an obligation to families displaced from slum homes, he said, but "does not feel obliged to transfer the identical families who have been dislodged to new projects—but rather to make sure that families of similar means get into the new housing units."

Chief obstacle to an effective housing program for the income group between $1,100 and $2,000 is high interest rates and the short terms on which private agencies are willing to provide credit, Ihlder contended.

He spoke in the Y. W. C. A. at a forum sponsored by the Washington Housing Association.

Wages Not All

Mercer Evans, labor relations director for the Farm Security Administration, speaking on the same program, protested against "the unthinking reaction of those who think labor costs are the chief obstacle to housing for this self-supporting low-income group."

Wages represent only 25 to 35 per cent of residential construction costs, he pointed out, and construction costs are only part of the total bill for a new house. Although wages per hour are relatively high in the building trades, the cyclical nature of employment brings the construction worker's annual income down to a point "where he usually can't afford the kind of housing we're talking about," Evans said.

Louis Justement, president of the District chapter of American Institute of Architects, saw monthly rentals of $40 as the lowest which private industry can offer.

"The answer," he declared, "is to stimulate private enterprise to such prosperity that workers will be able to afford such rentals from their own wages."

American U. Girl 'Adopts' Refugee

Miss Helen Brooks Davis, 2145 Decatur place northwest, American University student, has "adopted" 6-year-old Lorenzo Galocha, Spanish refugee, under the foster parent plan sponsored by a committee including Mrs. Roosevelt and Helen Hayes.

The lad is one of 100,000 in seven children's colonies near Biarritz. "Adoption" means guaranteeing a year's support for a child at a cost of $108.

PUBLIC ENEMY NO. X—ACIDITY

Today's food habits produce an alarming amount of acidity. The resulting gas, burning and indigestion are indications of more serious disorders that may follow.

One of the world's greatest MINERAL WATERS — MOUNTAIN VALLEY from Hot Springs, Arkansas, helps to maintain the alkaline reserve as well as neutralize excessive gastric acidity. MOUNTAIN VALLEY is delightful to drink. Not carbonated—Not laxative. It is delivered right to your home or to your office—wherever you are.

'Strive to Deserve Success,' Justice Laws Tells Class Of 22 Graduates From Sibley Hospital Nursing School

Twenty-two graduates of Sibley Memorial Hospital School of Nursing stood with lighted candles in Trinity Methodist Church last night and recited the Florence Nightingale pledge, "to pass my life in purity and to practice my profession faithfully."

Diplomas were handed to them by Dr. Lewis H. Taylor, president of the hospital. Two hundred parents and friends of the graduates attended the exercises.

"Strive to deserve success," the class was urged by Judge Bolitha J. Laws. "You will need an indomitable spirit to work with undismayed persistence in the face of incredible difficulties."

He urged them to remember above all the spiritual greatness of Florence Nightingale, the "Lady of the Lamp," in whose memory they lit their candles on receiving their diplomas.

Greetings were presented to the graduates by Mrs. Robert Stewart, for the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the church; by Paul Cromelin, for the board of directors of the hospital, and by Dr. Lee Spire, for the visiting doctors. The Rev. Daniel L. Ennis, pastor of the church, gave the invocation and the Rev. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington District of Methodist Churches, the benediction.

Miss Anne Evans sang and Stephan Willard played a violin solo, accompanied by Miss Dorothy Cunningham. Mrs. Flora P. Weber played the processional and recessional marches. Mrs. Helen Shoemaker, superintendent of nurses, presented the graduates to the president and pinned on each her hospital pin.

Members of the graduating class were:

Betty J. Buffington — Naomi Green
Wilma J. Cross — Delia Harrell — Ines Huffman — Margaret McMillan — Helen E. Padlick — Dorothy Thomas
Lillian Ely — Alice Hedges — Hallie L. Lasell — Barbara Smith — Grace Anderson — Shirley Wallace

Milk Rating Abolition Urged

The price structure of District milk producers, held at high levels by premium payments in order that distributors may receive high scores on the Health Department's monthly rating, will come "falling about their ears in one or two years," Agriculture Consumers Counsel Donald E. Montgomery told the District Women's Trade Union League at the Y. W. C. A. last night.

The root of the trouble, Montgomery indicated, was the Health Department rating, which establishes standards so high that they are no longer "for health purposes but for economic purposes."

To get milk with such an "exaggerated, unnecessarily" high rating raises prices to the consumers accordingly, he said, and urged that the rating be abolished as a "fraud on the public."

PENGUINS INTO METRONOME: Penguins, icicles and snowdrifts will garnish Wardman's Metronome Room for the summer. And "The Penguins," newly assembled orchestra, will make their bow in Metronome on June 1.

"The Penguins" will be Washington's first co-operative band a la Glenn Gray's Casa Loma orchestra. Chester de Chastain (at Wardman last summer with John Slaughter) will lead from his clarinet. But responsibility is equally divided between all members of the band. It's all for one and one for all. Wardman's Manager "Johnny" Johnson conceived the bright idea of organizing "The Penguins" and is their sponsor and business manager.

Penelope Ford, Irish colleen type, will sing with "The Penguins." Pianist will be Kenneth Foy, who played with Paul Kain last year. Leader de Chastain is now out West, visiting Russ Morgan, his former boss. P. S.—Just the balance of this week to enjoy Paul Kain's fancy swinging. Paul moves out of Metronome on Saturday night and the decorators move in.

SUMMER IN RIVIERA: Johnny Rhoades, bass player from Pittsburgh, has just been added to Pete Macias' Lounge Riviera band. Johnny will be a double-duty man, also acting as office manager for Pete and Steve Le Sieur. Riviera's summer picture also includes the installation of cool-looking blue and green lighting effects, new champagne-colored suits for the ork boys and, perhaps—a new girl singer.

MAYFLOWER INTERLUDE: Bob Brewer is now playing refreshing piano numbers in the Mayflower Lounge between 7 and 9 in the evening, filling in the interval between the cocktail and supper dance music by Dick Koons and his Glee Club.

MARYLAND CLUB GARDENS will open for the summer next Saturday. A beautiful country spot, but only a short way across the District line. Dancing, dining and a highly handsome swimming pool.

DRUMMING MAESTRO: When the Roger Smith Hotel's Powhatan Roof opens on June 1 you'll find Leader Steve Le Sieur whacking the drums instead of waving the baton. Says Steve, "I've decided to show the folks I can really play something, instead of just beating time."

MOTHER! MOTHER! May I go to swim? Run up to the Hour Glass this afternoon to get the answer. Swim suits and beach togs will be paraded in the style show. And the luscious Hour Glass models are the gals to show 'em. This will be Hour Glass' last style revue until fall.

P. S.—Hour Glass' owner-manager, Vincent Gallagher, has gone to New York. His Manhattan trips always forerun popping news in the King Cole Room and Hour Glass.

MANY DIPLOMATS are making reservations for the opening of the L'Escargot Terrace tomorrow eve. Folks who know their Paris rave about the replica of Montmartre that Marcel Colin has created in the Terrace's outdoor murals. You'll see La Mere Catherine's, the Lapin Agile, the Mairie, the Hotel u Noir and the Church of the Sacred Heart. All very gay and charming. Didine Frankl'n has written a song in honor of L'Escargot Terrace, "Au Rendez-Vous des Amis."

NIMBLE STEPPERS reign in Bamboo Gardens this week. Raoul and Virginia (see pic above) mix comedy and ballroom dancing. The Raoulettes put on a Lambeth Walk in taps, giving it the Broadway touch. Ronnie Moore ties her pretty self in bowknots in an acrobatic number. Plenty of other smart acts, too. Marian Dawn, looking like a valentine in pale pink, sings "Sly Old Gentleman From Featherbed Lane."

HITHER AND THITHER SECTION: Mayfair's warbling Louanna claims to be the only person who's gone to Manhattan in the last few weeks and not seen the World's Fair. But she admits getting a bird's eye view of it from the Long Island Railroad.

That peppery new drummer in the Lowe Shoreham orchestra is Johnny Smith.

Most wonderful Chinese food we ever tasted was that served at Lotus' "Judy Ellington Party." There was lobster fixed up with a puzzling but delectable dressing, water chestnuts, bamboo shoots and chow mein Canton style.

Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, has written another song. It's "Billboard Lady" and very much on the sparkling side.

Arthur Marchisio, maitre d'hotel of the Raleigh, is a real cosmopolitan. He's lived all over the world from Africa to the Argentine, and now America.

The Rainbow Room orchestra has given that vernal touch to their summer tan gabardines by adding green cravats and hankies.

NUMBERS THAT STEAM: "The Three Little Fissies" as done by that bunch of elegant maniacs, Cecil Golly and his band at Glen Echo. The boys wear baby bonnets and all make fish faces. It'll lay you low. Incidentally, all the Golly numbers are hot enough to fry eggs.

"Beer Barrel Polka" as rolled out by Hi Hat's Angie Rodante and the Red Jackets. It loks as though the "B. B." Polka is due soon to supersede those "Three Li'l Fishes" as top hit number.

All those songs that Marty Rubin sings out of his "little black book" at Griffith Farms. Put cotton in your Aunt Minnie's ears if you take her along. On second thought, she'd probably love 'em.

The balalaika solos of Troika's Sasha. Not swing in the American sense, but certainly the Russian equivalent.

The South Sea shivers of Rita Lopez in the Neptune Room. In the South Seas the girls don't shiver because they're cold.

"Say Si, Si," when Madrillon's Adelita Varela gives it that Latin umph-h, reinforced with flashing maracas.

White Sox Chase Haynes in Ninth, Beat Nats, 5-4

Yates Gains Third Round in British Amateur

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

One of the charming inconsistencies of baseball is the fact that the Nats, who have licked the Yankees three times in five games, haven't been able to win a game in five starts against the White Sox. There is other evidence that baseball is a zany sort of business.

POVICH

Within the past month, for example, the Nats paid $7,500 for Bud Thomas, a pitcher who wasn't good enough for the Athletics. And after the Nats discovered that he couldn't win for them, either, they were able to unload him to the Detroit Tigers for $7,500.

And another item that doesn't make sense finds no less than the Detroit Tigers now holding sole rights to last place. In little more than a month, Detroit, one of the clubs that was supposed to give the Yankees a fight, is 13 full games behind the Yanks and trailing such outfits as the Athletics and Browns. The Tigers, you recall, are the club that has Greenberg and Gehringer and York and Bridges on its pay roll.

Two years ago, the St. Louis Browns, in effect, told Infielder Billy Knickerbocker to get out of town. They didn't want him, couldn't use him, and told him he could look for another job. He found one with the New York Yankees, filled in nicely as a utility infielder last year, sat on the bench for three-fourths of the season, and collected a $6,000 World Series check with another one in prospect this season.

McQuinn Best First Baseman in A. L.

The best first baseman in the league at this writing, all things considered, is young George McQuinn, of the St. Louis Browns. McQuinn, a fancy fielder, hit a fancy .324 last season. Was he a flash in the pan? Apparently not. Currently he is swatting a dazzling .390 and leading the American League. The paradox is that the Yankees, who need a first baseman no less than Hitler needs Mussolini, are struggling along with Babe Dahlgren, a .213 hitter. Two years ago the Yankees sold First baseman McQuinn to the Browns for a comparative trifle.

Up in Yankee Stadium, the Yanks have just mopped up Oscar Vitt's Indians in a two-game series. Who were the Yankees who beat the Indians? Charley Kellar, Joe Gordon, Don Beggs, Babe Dahlgren and Buddy Rosar. That was tough, if only for the fact that they are the same guys that Vitt developed for the Yankees when he was managing Newark a couple of years ago.

Any club in the league could have bought little Edgar Smith for the $7,500 waiver price a couple of years ago. Nobody wanted him except Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, who paid Connie Mack the waiver price. Well, one of the five pitchers who have beaten the Yankees this sason is this same Smith, who turned the trick in his first start under the new management.

The Chicago White Sox may be leaving town at the proper moment. If they were here today, they would be facing 18-year-old Walter Masterson, the kid who held Detroit to six hits the other day and is described by Bucky Harris as "the best looking young pitcher I ever saw." Manager Jimmy Dykes suddenly recalled yesterday that last summer he gave young Masterson a one-day tryout before a game at Philadelphia and "didn't like his looks."

If you don't think it's a screwy sort of game, consider this please: Lefty Grove, who has hit only two home runs in his life, has already parked as many home runs over a fence this season (one) as the entire Washington club.

Yank Pennants, Bonura Slumps Only Sure Bets

Pitching was supposed to be the horrible gamble the Washington club was taking this season, and what has been happening? The pitching of the Nats has been the best of any club in the league with the exception of the Yankees, and the Nats can't hit.

And we are forced to mention also, the Cleveland Indians. One of the bright features of the Cleveland club that finished third last season was young Jeff Heath, who whaled away at a .343 rate and almost won the batting championship of the league. Heath is still in very good health, but this year he can't break into that Cleveland outfield. He isn't hitting.

Out at Cleveland the other day, there was a remarkable commentary on the whole zany business of baseball. Batting fourth, in the clean-up spot reserved for the best slugger on the team, was—who do you think? None other than Ben Chapman, who had made only one hit to date, was batting a measly .079, and was promoted to the clean-up job.

There are five pitchers on the Yankees (Ruffing, Pearson, Sundra, Hadley and Beggs) who haven't lost a game in starts that have totaled sixteen. Yet Lefty Gomez, the guy you'd like to have in there pitching your game for you, has already been licked twice and has won only a single game.

Aside from the runaway race the Yankees are making of it, there is only one other outstanding consistency in the business. That concerns Zeke Bonura. A year ago he hit a home run for the Nats in the opening game. A month later he was benched. This year he hit a homer for the Giants in their opener. A month later he was benched. It's getting so that Yankee pennants and Bonura's slumps are the only safe bets in baseball.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, May 23.—These are somber days for Mr. "Red" Evans, the curious Brooklyn Dodger pitcher who has been studiously avoiding a victory for so long that Bill Terry, who once was going to sue Larry MacPhail for highway robbery for stealing Evans from under his nose, now has changed his charge to petty larceny.

CONSIDINE

Mr. Evans is one to abuse himself wordily for his shortcomings and thus it can be readily understood that his recent maladventures have aroused in him new fonts of self-excoriation. We came upon him, moaning in a St. Louis hotel lobby the other night. He had been driven to a premature tub that afternoon by a base hit from the bat of Don Gutteridge, who hits about his age, and he was inconsolable.

"Some guys I wouldn't have minded," cried Mr. Evans. "Some guys I would have said, "Well, why shouldn't they hit a dope like me?' but when Gutteridge spoils my ball game I come to the end. And you know why he done it? He done it because I'm the turkey who throws him a high curve, the only thing he can hit. By gosh, you know what? Neither him nor me belong in this here league."

Red has been hit so often on the Dodgers' Western trip that his infielders have taken out more life insurance, but Mr. Evans' tribulations have not ended there. Red was fined 100 clams at Hot Springs this spring for drinking up all the beer in that peaceful little village—to keep the other Dodgers away from temptation. Red gave up the demon brew for life after that.

On the Merry-Go-Round

Imagine Leo Durocher's surprise, therefore, when one night while dining in the corner of the merry-go-round bar in the Copley Plaza in Boston, who should come in but Mr. Evans—accompanied by a bottle of beer. The boys stared at each other beadily for the five minutes that it took Mr. Evans to be borne majestically around the bend and out of sight. Leo settled down, grimly, to await the next coming of his tippling pitcher. But when the merry-go-round got around to that point again, Evans was gone—his only monument an empty bottle.

Leo nailed him going out the door, and he said some pretty harsh things. He was saying some more of them when Evans wearily raised his hand for silence.

"Leo," he said, his voice full of determination, "as long as you live you'll never see me around that bar again."

Durocher was touched by the tone of Red's penitence. "I don't know why I was ever fool enough to do it," Red went on, "but you've got my word that it'll never happen again."

"That's fine, Red," Leo said. "I know it takes a lot of courage to make a resolution like that."

Poor Mr. Poffenberger

"Courage hell," roared Red, "them bums on that merry-go-round fined me 30 cents a bottle for that beer. I'm through—with them."

One of he secret regrets of the great man's life is that his high moral code prohibits his speaking to Mr. Cletus (the Baron) Poffenberger. Some rude commentators have gone so far as to suggest that with the possible exception of Buck Newsom, of the Tigers, these two Dodgers run-one-two in baseball's Holligan Derby. They do have certain things in common at that: Their picturesque speech, their twin horror of ever going to bed on time, their patriotic thirst for native beer, and the passion with which they are averting victory. But there the resemblance stops, at the request of Mr. Evans.

Informed that Mr. Poffenberger sought a handy pub, after being belted around in the box by the Reds on Sunday, Mr. Evans was aghast. Slowly pouring a beer, while he chose just the right curse to bring down on his enemy's head, Mr. Evans said:

"The trouble with that fellow is that he ain't got no regard for condition!"

Case Scoring on Home Run as Ball Bounds Away From White Sox Catcher

400,000 Fans to See Epsom Derby Today

Lord Rosebery's Blue Peter Favored In 155th Renewal of Classic; Queen Mary to Miss Event

By the Associated Press.

Epsom, England, May 23.—All thoughts of political "crisis" vanished from Britons' minds tonight as the advance guard of an expected crowd of 400,000 moved into this sleepy little town for tomorrow's 155th renewal of the derby.

Headed by Lord Rosebery's Blue Peter, short-priced favorite at 4 to 1, 30 3-year-olds still were in the running for this greatest of English flat races—a gruelling mile and a half gallop over an up-and-down "U"-shaped track.

All night long the crowds continued to pour into this town on the lush green moors, as the British headed for their racing classic. They came by trains, by buses, by automobiles and even by horse and wagon.

One factor will detract from the race. Queen Mary, most beloved of the royal family, will be absent tomorrow as the result of an auto accident today. The Duke of Gloucester and perhaps the Duke of Kent, former racing enthusiasts like their grandfather, King Edward VII, will be present.

Late arrivals brought with them the latest callover of odds from London, which maintained Blue Peter in the same top spot he has enjoyed since he won the Two Thousand Guineas. Just behind him in the heavy betting was Hypnotist, bred and owned by William Woodward, whose Johnstown won the Kentucky Derby early this month. Hypnotist, only American owned horse still in the race, was installed at 8 to 1 in the final callover.

City betting, plus the great sums won and lost on the Calcutta and Irish Sweepstakes, should make this the heaviest betting derby in years. Some $613,800 were sent across the board at the Victoria Club. The Irish sweeps alone will send a minimum of just under $2,000,000 across the Atlantic to Americans who hold tickets.

Nearest to Blue Peter and Hypnotist among the public choices came Edward Esmond's Foxcub, ridden by the great Gordon Richards, at 100 to 9, with Heliopolis, Casanova, Admiral's Walk andDhoti, The Atter, the Agha Kahn's Hopeful, all rated at 100 to 7.

Woodward had two horses nominated for the turf classic, Hypnotist running with Foxbrough II, a full brother to Gallant Fox, but the latter was withdrawn.

Md. Penalizes Tracks Lacking Totalisators

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 23.—One-mile race tracks which do not install totalisator calculators will be penalized one-half per cent of their betting "take" by the Maryland Racing Commission.

The racing body, in a move to force installation of the "totes" at Laurel, Havre de Grace and Bowie, today announced that tracks with totalisators will be permitted a 10 per cent "whack" of betting grosses.

Tracks which fail to install the totes will be permitted only a 9½ per cent cut.

Pimlico is the only major Maryland track which has a tote device.

Davy Day T. K. O.'s Pedro Montanez In New York Fight

New York, May 23.—Davey Day, the frail little kid from Chicago's West Side who wasn't supposed to have a chance, scrambled the welterweight ranks tonight by stopping the highly favored Puerto Rican puncher, Pedro Montanez, in eight rounds at Madison Square Garden. Day weighed 137; Montanez, 144¼.

Poffenberger Fined $400, Suspended

Dodgers' Pilot Says Easter Rabbit Brought 'Bad Egg'

By Bob Considine.

Cincinnati, May 23.—Cletus "The Baron" Poffenberger, one of the most eccentric right-handers on the Brooklyn pitching staff, was fined $400 and indefinitely suspended here today.

The charges against him are that he stayed out until 3 a. m. this morning, sampling this village's many brews, and then failed to show up at Crosley Field this afternoon for the game between the Dodgers and the Reds. He was tagged $200 on each count. His pay automatically ceased with the suspension and it is possible that Larry MacPhail, president of the team, will take further action.

CLETUS POFFENBERGER
Behind 8-Ball Again . . .

Poffenberger was up and about the hotel lobby before game time today. In answer to a reporter's query as to why he wasn't at the ball yard, the young pitcher replied, "I'm taking the day off."

Manager Leo Durocher snorted when he heard this. "He's been having 'off' days ever since we got him. Easter Sunday. That rabbit certainly brought us a bad egg."

The $400 fine raised Poffenberg-

Chisox Rout Haynes And Defeat Nats, 5-4

Rookie Hurler 'Blows' Up in Ninth After Pitching 7-Hit Ball for Eight Innings; Joe Also Gets 2 Hits

By Shirley Povich.

Rookie Joe Haynes tasted his first big league defeat yesterday, and it was a bitter does. On the brink of his third straight triumph, young Haynes lost his control, his 4-3 lead, and the ball game in a hectic ninth inning. The final figures were: Chicago, 5; Washington, 4.

Up to that ninth, big Haynes was moving along nicely, pitching 7-hit ball in a duel with Jack Knott. He had made two of the Nats' six hits, the last a two-bagger that drove in what appeared to be the winning run. He was fielding his position like a big leaguer born and the 3,000 customers were watching in smug approval.

And then Haynes walked Marvin Owen before getting anybody out in the ninth, to put the tying run on base. Then he pitched a single to Tony Rensa whose drive slithered through the infield and moved Owen to third. Then Haynes, a bit panicky, filled the bases by walking Pinch Hitter Hank Steinbacher on four pitches.

At this point, Pete Appleton was called in from the bullpen and two of the runners Haynes put on base scored. Ollie Bejma lofted a long fly to George Case to usher Owen home from third and move Rensa to that base, and Joe Kuhel duplicated Bejma's swat to move Rensa home with the winning run.

Left-handed Thornton Lee, old nemesis of the Nats, was given the job of protecting that one-run lead, and he did it after a bit of a scare. After Pinch Hitters Johnny Welaj and Charley Gelbert failed to get on base in the Nats' ninth, another pinch hitter, Bobby Estalella, stirred up a terrific false alarm. He slammed a long fly into leftfield that momentarily appeared to be a home run until the wind blew it foul by a dozen feet. On the next pitch, Estalella grounded out meekly to Lee.

Yanks Plunge On, Capture 12th Straight

New York, May 23.—The crushing power of the Yankees was displayed in two game-wrecking innings today as the world champions pounded out four home runs and a 7-3 victory—their twelfth straight—over the Cleveland Indians.

Ambassador Gives Estalella Trophy At Today's Game

A bevy of diplomats headed by Senor Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Ambassador from Cuba, and including the staff of the Cuban Embassy here will turn out today at Griffith Stadium to present a trophy to a fellow countryman—Roberto Estalella, the Nats' leftfielder.

The Ambassador will present Roberto with the Sporting News trophy, awarded him as the most valuable player in the Piedmont League last season.

Jarring Jim hopped into the limelight in 1937 but did not get into action last year because of a broken right ankle suffered in the second game of the season against Penn State.

The 24-year-old Port Deposit, Md., boy in all probability will take over blocking duties at the right halfback position and will see plenty of action as a kicker, it was said. In Smith and Hartman, the Redskins lost two of their most potent punters.

Meade, fullback at Maryland, is fully recovered from his ankle injury, suffered in the second game of the season with Penn State last year, Jack Espey, George Marshall's chief emissary, said last night.

After a strenuous season at the second attack position on Maryland's lacrosse team, the big 6-foot-1 back has convinced Redskin officials he is ready for professional action. Meade will be graduated from the university in June.

Meade was kept "under cover" by a piece of Redskin strategy—that is, he was not put on the selective draft list which would have given seven other professional league teams with lower ratings than the Skins to pick him off. Marshall chose to take a chance on no foreign scouts noticing Meade.

"Meade told us he could have played late last season, but Coach Dobson did not want him to risk hurting the ankle again," Espy said.

U. S. Golfer, Chapman Meet Today

Ned Phillips, Philly, Defeated; Bill Holt And Ellsworth Vines Play for 1st Time

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Correspondent.

Hoylake, England, May 23.—Charley Yates, of Atlanta, defended the British amateur golf championship with his heart today and advanced to the third round, where tomorrow he meets Dick Chapman of Greenwich, Conn.

Struggling against a disobedient set of wooden clubs, Yates stood up against the greatest scoring spree of the tournament, and finally beat the Scottish internationalist, Donald Cameron, 2 and 1.

Chapman, more consistent than any man in the field, rattled through the first 13 holes in 4 under 4s, and beat Maurice Budd, 6-foot-3-inch Englishman, 5 and 3. One American slashing Ned Phillips, of Philadelphia, was defeated by John Morrison on the last green, and two other United States players, tennis professional Ellsworth Vines and "Trailer Bill" Holt, of Syracuse, N. Y., will play tomorrow for the first time.

Two Up at Turn

Yates played nine holes of golf today that deserve to be remembered in this historic club along with the feats of old John Ball, Bob Jones and Walter Hagen.

John Ball, 77-year-old golfing immortal, won the Amateur championship eight times and the Open once.

The champion was 2 up at the turn with a 37, one over par, and at the tenth Cameron, a Clydeside marine engineer, rapped two splendid shots dead to the pin. Yates banged his approach up into a corner of the green, 45 feet from the cup, and, without the slightest hesitation, hit the ball hard at the hole.

The gallery of over 1,000 watched the ball curve down that long hill toward the cup and watched Charley walking after it. "G'wan, get in there," drawled Yates, and in it went. The crowd roared.

Lipped the Cup

On the next hole it was the same. Cameron banged his drive well onto the seaside green and Yates pushed a spoon shot high onto a sand dune 30 feet above the pin. The only way he could put the ball close was to pitch it into the rough at the side of the green and let it bobble on and he did just that. His ball lipped the cup.

But on the next hole his brassie caught up with him. He tried to force a long, low shot home against the wind, but it caught the top of a bunker and buried itself deep in the sand. "If the hole was in China I'd be halfway there," cracked Yates as he exploded out. Cameron, meanwhile, took the hole with a 4 and Charley was only 1 up.

Again at the short thirteenth Charley had to chip back on the green and run down a 4-footer to tie, but he sliced his second shot to the long fourteenth and hit his third over the green, while Cameron was 4 feet from the cup in three. Yates tried hard to sink that approach and save his lead. He even yelled at the ball to "get in the house, get in there," but it slid past and the match was all even.

Halves the Fifteenth

A great spade-mashie chip out of deep rough and a 4-foot putt gave Yates a half at No. 15 and he won

By Bill Burnett.

Though their chances of taking the interhigh baseball crown were irretrievably lost last week with the forfeit of a game, Woodrow Wilson players nevertheless proved themselves a potent factor in the race yesterday when they mauled Roosevelt's West division leaders, 13 to 2, in the biggest upset of the series.

Not to be outdone, Central entertained Western's second-place club on the Mount Pleasant diamond and sent it back to Georgetown with a 12 to 0 shutout against it. The two wide victories, constituting the next to last double-header of the regular season, did away with any hope of a playoff in the West division. The sectional outcome now rests squarely on the final game between Central and Roosevelt Friday.

Well Pitched Games

Both games yesterday were well pitched, despite the heavy shellackings undergone by Roosevelt and Western. Wilson had but ten hits in its victory, and Central 12. The losers had six and four respectively.

In both cases, errors rather than safeties decided the games. Western had itself a real spree in the misplay department, with eight, and Roosevelt managed to put in an error whenever it would do the most damage.

One Rider error, in the first inning, loaded the bases and set the stage for Wilson's first score after the first two men up, Julie Columbus and Joe Morgan, had been walked. Nick Cokinos broke up the game when he doubled to deep center, and from there in it was all Wilson.

Herman Byer, whose flappy-wristed hurling has been slightly ineffective this season, closed out his high school career with a 6-hit performance, and pounded three runs over in Wilson's five-run uprising in the fifth with the only triple of the game.

Young Eddie Paylor started for the Riders, but was taken out after Cokinos' first-inning double, and Bill Robertson took his place. Robertson's swift ball set the Presidents down until the fifth—he fanned seven in four frames—but a succession of walks and Byers' triple proved fatal to him, also. The Riders' only good hurler, Eddie vermillion, took over with the count 7-0 against him.

Rozzelle Shines

It was little Dicky Rozzelle, right-hand control artist, who gave Central its chance for the title. Had Western won the game, it would have had a cinch for a playoff and possibly a clean West section victory.

Rozzelle threw for eight innings, allowed but four hits and fanned nine. Charley Kligman had a fling in the last frame as Rozzelle went out, probably to be saved for the Mount Pleasanters' decisive game with Roosevelt.

Three Western errors, a stolen base, a walk and Pat Fenlon's solitary single scored all of Central's four runs in the second inning. Three more were added in both the third and fourth. Dick Farr and Lorenz Zimmerman doubling in the third, and three singles accounting for the fourth-inning tallies.

Western, it seemed, lost the game and a title chance when its scoring threat was throttled in the first. With men on second and third, and a score within its grasp, Western went down for keeps when Benny Steiner made a spectacular catch of Ray Wrenn's bingle. From then on, it was a hopelessly outclassed nine. Steiner, incidentally, was the batting star of the game, with two singles in three times.

Local Cricketers Play Ripping Game But Lose, 106-59

The Washington Cricket Club opened its season officially Saturday against the Haverford College Alumni—but they didn't get the score figured out until yesterday. The score was Haverford Alumni, 106 runs, Washington, 59.

Everyone agreed that it was a ripping good contest, although an Alumni batter did keep batting the better part of an hour and score 29 of his team's runs. The game was played at Langley Park, Md., the estate of L. McCormick-Goodhart, of the British Embassy.

Tea and biscuits followed the closely played contest, and the visiting cricketers said the Washington cricketers were a blooming sporting lot and deserved a better break in the game.

The local cricketers—all English-born American citizens—will go to Philadelphia to play the Tennyson Cricket Club Sunday.

Interior Downs Engraving, 7-3

The Departmental League baseball title was a step nearer for Interior Department nine yesterday when it came from behind to beat Bureau of Engraving, 7 to 3, on the East Ellipse. It was the seventh straight for Interior.

Bureau pushed over a man in the first inning, and clung to the lead until the fifth, when the score was knotted. Then Interior forged ahead with runs in the sixth and seventh, locking up the game in the eighth with four tallies. Wynne, with a double, and Keiper, with a triple, featured the late inning rally.

Union Printers Down FBI in U. S. League

Union Printers shut out Federal Bureau of Investigation for six innings in the Government Baseball League yesterday, winning by a 9-to-2 margin in a game on the South Ellipse. Gardiner's six-hit hurling was the feature.

Runs in the first, second, fourth and sixth innings put the Printers in possession of a wide lead until F. B. I. began its drive in the seventh, and last, stanza. Only two runs, however, came in, featured by Schneider's triple.

Softball Games Sought

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

Just got a wire from the newspaper fotogs up in Canada about no cat looking at royalty if it's nearsighted.

They say they've been caught 20 feet off base and their pictures look like a new issue of postage stamps.

The fotogs are squawking over the distance because a camera is pretty much like a mouse trap. The subject must be very close to get caught right.

We got a laugh out of the telegram because an American newspaper fotog is harder to stop than a spring cold and is twice as persistent. We've filed the telegram among our souvenirs.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN.

Hardly a day but what there are calls for information about accommodations, as well as the best way to get there.

Going by the way of Oregon Inlet—N. C. No. 34 to Whalebone Filling Station turn left down the beach. Ferry over Oregon Inlet and follow on down the beach. For those who have never done this kind of driving, don't forget to deflate the tires slightly. Although this route is traversed every day in the year, we prefer the route through Greenville or Washington and follow Route 264 to Engelhard, where ferry leaves for Hatteras at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.; on Saturdays and Sundays 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. This ferry makes connection with the Ocracoke ferry.

Accommodations at this season of the year should be arranged ahead. There is one small hotel, the Atlantic View, phone Hatteras 113, as well as several private houses where paying guests are welcome.

Five attractive and completely furnished vacation cabins in the Cape Hatteras State Park will be ready for sportsmen and vacationists about August 1. They are a part of the program of development which ultimately will be the first large national seashore park anywhere in the United States.

In addition to these cabins, the buildings formerly used by the Lighthouse Service in the close vicinity of the famous old Cape Hatteras Light have been improved and converted into vacation apartments. Both are available to fishermen at reasonable rates.

For beach fishing, we know of no other section comparable, but for the Gulf Stream fishing, we would say—wait another year or two until a little more pioneering work is done. One day, along with Ocean City, Md., Hatteras will be one of the big game fishing centers of the Middle Atlantic Coast.

Fishing is indelibly tied to small boats and boating, for only through the one is the other possible. Yet each year some misguided representative of a sovereign State brings forth a bill that would completely throttle this necessary adjunct of the greatest participation sport in the world today by making the operation regulations unbearable.

New Bill Introduced

First it was the labor organization draft, which the President signed September 1, 1938, and which would have compelled every boat to carry not only a captain and a mate, but a licensed engineer as well. It was laughable on the face of it. As a result of considerable opposition, H. B. 950 was signed by the president in March, 1939. It exempted all vessels under 200 tons.

Now they are at it again. A new bill, H. B. 1809, introduced by Congressman Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington, would make all motor-propelled boats over 15 gross tons subject to all the provisions of the laws governing the Steamboat Inspection Service relating to steam vessels. The passage of this bill would require annual inspection of hull, engines and equipment, and the carrying of paid licensed officers as well as other regulations that now cover only ocean-going liners and other large craft.

And H. B. 3837, introduced by Congressman Lawrence J. Connery, of Massachusetts, very similar to H. B. 1809 except that it would not apply to some of the larger recreational craft.

Legislation, if enacted into law, that would have a far more serious effect on pleasure boating than Draft Convention No. 53, and it is of the utmost importance, if you are one of those lucky enough to have a vote, to let your Congressman know of your disapproval of such misguided efforts or get in touch with Chairman Schuyler Otis Bland of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Wrestler Tells All—He Plays The Saxophone

Cliff Olson, who will meet the Golden Terror tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, yesterday began talking of retiring from the wrestling business and going back to his old life as a musician.

He says he thinks maybe he'll get himself an orchestra and stand up in front of it blowing a saxophone, just as he used to do when he was young and a student at good old Gustavus Adolphus University in Minnesota.

Cliff confided this to Promoter Joe Turner yesterday in a long talk with the local grunt-and-groan mogul. Instead of keeping quiet and trying to forget the whole thing, Joe called his taff together, and the news was foisted all around in no time.

Cliffie, it was said, directed his own orchestra while at the Minnesota institution. Can Cliffie play the saxophone—forsooth, he can "tickle the ivories a la Eddie Duchin and rattle the drums a la Gene Kruppa." This means he plays the piano and drums, it is understood.

This news was accepted with good grace in some quarters yesterday. Others said it was too bad that it wasn't The Terror who had music to fall back on, for he has shown that he can't wrestle and sooner or later will stop trying. Several said they hoped it would be sooner.

Because almost everyone believes anything can happen in a game which tolerates such characters as The Terror, Cliffie's claims that he is a triple-threat musician went practically uncontested. Promoter Turner did not say whether Cliffie will tear off a couple of rhapsodies between bouts tomorrow but immediately changed the subject.

"Oh yes, we will have Nanjo Singh against Dropkick Murphy, Sammy Stein against Hank Metheny, Jim McClinstock against Jules Strongbow, Tom Mahoney against Pete Managoff, and practically everybody against The Terror," mused Promoter Turner.

Four Seeded Players Advance in Army-Navy Net Tourney

Mary Cootes Berlin, Anne Ellis, Miss Lee And Willie O'Steen Score With Ease

The four seeded players in Washington's annual tennis tournament at Army Navy Country Club continued their clean sweep in the quater-finals yesterday when Mary Cootes Belin, Anne Ellis, Margo Lee and Willie O'Steen triumphed decisively over their respective opponents.

In the morning rounds Mrs. Belin, who is favored to win the series, defeated Edith McCulloch, 8—6, 6—1, by virtue of the sweeping style which has ranked her tops in local competitions.

Formidable Forehand

On an adjoining court Anne Ellis played a steady game to win over Edna Vest, 6—4, 7—5. Miss Ellis' driving forehand was chiefly responsible for her victory.

The afternoon events were played beneath a sun tha had the contestants thoroughly broiled. Margo Lee's sparkling game chalked up a clever win over Johanna Zetlemeier, 6—1, 6—2. Miss Lee's volley was sufficient to drub her opponent to an easy victory.

Dorette Miller Beaten

In the final game of the afternoon, petite Willie O'Steen also had little trouble in polishing off Dorette Miller, 6—1, 6—1.

The tournament will be continued Thursday with Mrs. Belin playing Miss Ellis at 2 o'clock, and Miss O'Steen against Miss Lee at 3, also at the Army Navy Club.

The results:

Mary Cootes Belin defeated Edith McCulloch, 8—6, 6—1; Anne Ellis defeated Edna Vest, 6—4, 7—5; Willie O'Steen defeated Dorette Miller, 6—1, 6—1; Margo Lee defeated Johanna Zetlemeier, 6—1, 6—2.

Chisox Chase Haynes, Beat Nats, 5 to 4

St. Louis Browns, was giving the Nats a horrible time of it for five innings, pitching three-hit ball and shutting 'em out. By that time, the White Sox had a 2-0 lead, compiled in the fourth inning when Radcliff, Appling, Kreevich and Owen rapped out four consecutive singles, two of the infield variety.

Case Gets Homer

And then George Case put the Nats back in the ball game. After Haynes drew a walk to lead off the sixth, Case slashed a line drive into the leftfield corner. Haynes scored on the play and Case, with utter disregard for Coach Clyde Milan's frantic waving at third base, refused to be satisfied with a triple and legged it home, too. He scored because Luke Appling's relay of Walker's throw to the plate took a freak hop off Catcher Tresh's chest protector. Case was credited with a home run.

That blow tied the score at 2-2, but in the seventh, another of the five walks Haynes surrendered paved the way for the Sox to return to the lead. He passed Tresh with one out and then he hit Pitcher Knott on the back with a pitched ball. Bejma's single to right scored the run, and the Sox were limited to a run only because Knott was doubled up at the plate when he tried to score after Wright's catch of Kuhel's modest fly.

Potent Rookie Battery

The Nats' rookie battery of Haynes and Early were a potent pair in the seventh themselves, and reinstalled the club in the lead. After Wasdell walked with two out, Early met the requirements of a hit-and-run order nicely by slamming a two-bagger against the centerfield fence to score Wasdell with the tying run. And then Haynes, a fair sort of hitter, himself lashed a double into left to score Early.

That blow knocked Knott out of the box and in the eighth, against Clint Brown, the Nats muffed a chance to consolidate their gains. Buddy Lewis led off the inning with a double to left and Taft Wright moved him to third with a long fly to right. But neither Myer nor Travis could push Lewis home. Marvin Owen made a fancy pickup of Myer's drive to throw him out, and Travis flied out.

And then, eventually came the ninth, as ninth innings will.

O'Donnell's Defeat 7-Up Nine by 8 to 5

O'Donnell's baseball team bunched it 11 hits yesterday to win an 8-to-5 Industrial League game from 7-Up nine on the West Ellipse. Ottie Printz, the winning hurler, was also touched for 11 safeties, but they were slightly more scattered.

Four runs in the first inning sent O'Donnell's away with a bang, and it continued to keep just ahead of the opposition. Besides his pitching, Printz contributed a triple to the Grill cause.

Newsom Beats Red Sox for Tigers, 7-2

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 23.—The desperate tail-end Detroit Tigers regained their batting eyes today and pounded Buck Newsom, their recent pitching acquisition, into a 7-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Tigers belted Rookie Woody Rich and Emerson Dickman, another right-hander, for a total of 11 timely hits, but two of them, Hank Greenberg's eighth homer of the season and his mighty blast to left field for two bases, accounted for three runs, enough to decide the issue.

Newsom, who defeated the Red Sox in St. Louis before being traded to the Tigers, also gave 11 hits, but the sockers were unable to bunch them. Jimmy Foxx, suffering another sinus attack, remained on the sidelines.

Poffenberger Fined, Suspended By Dodgers

er's fine total to $600 for the Dodgers' road trip. He was nicked for $200 on the first night of the trip, when the squad left for Boston on a sleeper the night of May 12. The players were asked to be in their berths by midnight. Poffenberger appeared ahead of time, put on his pajamas, chatted with his teammates, and then, after the boys had buttoned their berths' green blinds, "The Baron" put his street clothes on over his pajamas and rushed to the nearest beer tap

He started only one game for the Dodgers. He was the first man out in the first inning, failing to retire a batter before being shelved. He made two other appearances in relief roles, with no success.

May Quit Game

Poffenberger, who has confided to friends that he may quit baseball, was purchased by the Brooklyn club from Detroit for $7,500, after Detroit had farmed him to Beaumont. They advanced him $1,200 to pay his debts, and signed him at a 100 per cent increase in salary, or $8,400. MacPhail believed that this philanthropic move would cause the pitcher to reform. It was believed that "The Baron" was doing his night prowling because he was worried over his low pay—but as it turned out the pay increase backfired and "The Baron" became just twice as social.

Poffenberger won six and lost seven for Detroit last year, before they shipped him to Toledo. There he won eight and lost three. He once strikingly described himself as a pitcher with "a million dollar arm and a ten-cent head."

Reliance Nine Defeats Jimmie's

Its first Sherwood League softball defeat of the season was suffered yesterday by Jimmie's Grill, Reliance Life stopping a late rally to win by 7 to 4. Jack Butterworth's eight-hit pitching accounted for the Grill loss, as well as the heavy hitting of Veltri. Kavalier. Zunic and Batson, of Reliance.

Reliance went into a three-run lead in the third, and managed to hold that margin the rest of the way. Paul Grace was touched for 12 safeties as the Grillmen lost their first game in six starts.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

George Case is challenging Taft Wright for the lead in the Nats' Man of the Month contest following his heroics in yesterday's game which earned him the chief award of points. The points were distributed as follows:

To Case, four points, because his home run in the sixth inning with a man on base put the Nats back in the ball game, tying the score.

To Joe Haynes, two points, because he kept the Nats in the game both with his hitting and pitching.

To Jake Early, two points, because he doubled in the seventh with two out to tie the score again for the Nats.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he made two of the Nats' six hits and attempted to start a rally with his double in the eighth.

Manor Women Golfers Lose To Chevy Chase

Columbia, Army-Navy, Congressional Score In Team Matches

By Merrell Whittlesey

Chevy Chase women golfers ended Manor's threat for the first team championship of the Women's District Golf Association by trouncing the Norbeck club representatives, 9 to 3, yesterday at Indian Spring. The one-sided score was a surprise, as Manor was figured for a tie or possible victory.

The other matches were one-sided triumphs, Columbia scoring over Argyle, 12-0; Congressional defeating Washington, 10-2, and Army and Navy scoring over Woodmont by a like score. The hosts drew a bye.

Chevy Chase Leads

With each of the three leading teams having played six matches, Chevy Chase leads with 49½ points to 48 for Manor and Indian Spring's defending champions. The Chevy Chase-Indian Spring match in the near future may decide the title.

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt scored three points over Marion Brown and Mrs. L. G. Pray in the top-match of the Chevy-Chase-Manor clash. Mrs. Hill won the eighth hole with a four to go 1 up, and they held the margin through the ninth to win the first nine. They won the back nine 3 up with Mrs. Platt accounting for several holes with sensational putts.

Mrs. H. J. Simons and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall teamed well to score Manor's only victory, over Louise Claytor and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, 2 points to 1. They halved eight of nine holes on the first nine, the other going to Manor's duo.

Mrs. Henry Goodman and Mrs. Gilbert Hahn accounted for Woodmont's only two points against Army and Navy, while Mrs. Myron Davey played the out nine in 38 and the round in 82 to lead Congressional to its 10-2 triumph, with Washington scoring in each of the last three matches, but only one point in one and a half in the others. Columbia was not extended in blanking Argyle.

Army and Navy, Congressional and Chevy Chase scored in the second team play at Columbia, with Indian Spring, Washington and Manor on the losing side.

base blows, and in the sixth it was Joe Gordon and Red Rolfe who turned the trick. Two mates were aboard when Gordon blasted his into the lower leftfield stands, as the climax of a five-run splurge, sending Johnny Allen to the showers.

The Indians tallied once in the third, sixth and seventh, but were unable to bunch their hits off young Atley Donald.

Donald achieved his third straight victory although he was touched for 11 hits. The Yanks only made nine altogether.

Allen's loss was his second of the season.

D. C. Women Golfers Play Baltimore

A dozen women golf stars of the District will attempt to gain partial revenge for losing the Maryland State Championship to Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, when they meet the Monumental City's all-star team in an intercity match today at Manor, starting at 10 a. m.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Marion Brown, of the host club, will play against Mrs. Sloman and her partner, either Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, the many-time State champion, or Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, medalist in the recent State event.

The locals handed the Baltimoreans two defeats last year, at Indian Spring and Elkridge, and will be favored today as they have more strength through the entire 12 players, while the visitors should hold their own in the top brackets but are not strong all the way through.

The remainder of the team, announced by intercity team captain Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, will find Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. Walter Stokes, the No. 2 team; Mrs. Landra Platt and Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, next; Mrs. Charlotte Stern, India Spring, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, in the fourth berth; Mrs. K. S. Giles, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Huma Peabody, Army and Navy, fifth, and Mrs. H. J. Simons and Mrs. Dowdall, of the host club, the sixth team.

The last executive meeting of the Women's District Golf Association until fall will be held tomorrow at Columbia Club, according to Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president.

5 Navy Teams Practice for Big Week-End

Lacrosse With Army Features Climactic Saturday Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, May 23.—Coaches and members of the five Navy teams which will oppose the Army next Saturday—lacrosse, tennis and golf at Annapolis, and baseball and track at West Point—jumped into their final preparations this afternoon for the climactic contests.

The lacrosse game will be played in Thompson Stadium, which will afford far greater public accommodations than the usual grounds, and not only are the Navy people keen to win against their service rivals, but they had been considered definitely out of the picture when they lost to the Old Liners.

There will be no charge for admission, but tickets must be obtained from the Athletic Association office in advance.

The tennis match will be in the morning, and will consist of nine singles and four doubles. The Army won last year, 12 to 1, and though no such route is likely this year, still the Army appears to have the better chance of victory.

The track meets at West Point may well depend upon the condition of Leon Chabot, the Navy's chubby sprinter, who has a strained muscle in his leg and did not appear against Virginia at all.

Chabot to Start in 100

Chabot began light exercise today but all medical officers will say is he may be able to get in one race, probably the 100-yard dash, against the Army. Last year, Chabot won the 220-yard and was second to Dalton, his teammate, in the 100, so that he had been counted upon to take both dashes this year.

Of the five teams, the nine is the only one which will be in action before the Army match. It plays Western Maryland here Wednesday and Coach Max Bishop will probably use Jerry Bruckel, Jimmy Madison and Howard Schoenbaum in three-inning shifts on the mound. Chances somewhat favor Bruckel to start against the Army. He pitched the winning game, 6 to 1, against the Cadets last year.

the sixteenth with two perfect woods, while Cameron put his second in the sand.

It was inevitable that Charley would get a break after all this heroic scrambling, and he got it at No. 17. Here he pushed another drive into a nest of bunkers and the ball luckily landed and stopped in a 5-yard alley of rough between two traps. Yates took advantage of this by cracking a noble recovery into the heart of the green, and he won the hole and the match when the Scotsman hooked into deep rough. The cards:

Lady Buck Sets Track Record for Charles Town Course

Itsa Maid Breaks Mile and Quarter Track Mark in 7th; Double Pays $126.80

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., May 23.—Some of the fastest racing in this neck of the woods marked today's program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. In three consecutive races, the track record was equaled once and broken twice. W. Royle's Lady Buck's name goes on the program as the holder of the mark for the "Charles Town course" of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs. The 8-year-old mare, who leaves racing soon for a breeding farm, turned in time of 1:15 1-5 to knock three-fifths of a second off the record held by Trixie Lass.

In the previous race, Mrs. M. H. Waugh's Flagabout had stepped this route in 1:15 2-5, while in the fifth race, Strumming was clocked in 1:15 4-5 to match the time of Trixie Lass that has stood for two years.

A fifth of a second was clipped off the track record for a mile and a quarter by J. C. Clark's Itsa-Maid in the seventh race. The one-time steeplechaser won by 8 lengths to register time of 2:05 4-5. The old mark was held by Capt. Evart Johnston's Dun Lucky.

The track record for 4½ furlongs probably would have gone by the boards, too, except for the fact that P. H. Faulconer's Roman Boy, the easy winner, stumbled leaving the gate. In addition, Roman Boy won as he pleased by two and one-half lengths.

With Sammy Palumbo in the saddle, the 3-year-old son of Ha Ha was backed down to a $3.20 mutuel. Palumbo, riding his third winner of the day, pulled Roman Boy back on his hoofs after the near accident leaving the gate and sent him to the front. Cats Cradle, and Intelligentsia did a lot of hustling behind him, but Roman Boy went right on about his business to register his second win of the meeting. Cats Cradle was second, a length in front of Intelligentsia, who was making her first start on any racetrack.

B. & O. Started First U.S. Train 109 Years Ago

Horse-Drawn Brigade Ran From Baltimore To Ellicott's Mills

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, May 23.—Tomorrow will be the 109th anniversary of the first American railroad train. It ran from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills, Md., and return, over the first 13-mile section of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad then building westward. But there was no sound of bell, nor toot of whistle on America's first train, because the engine was a horse.

Nor was it called a train, but a "brigade of cars." The Baltimore & Ohio's president, Philip E. Thomas, had published the first railroad timetable a few days before. In it he advertised--"A brigade, or train of coaches, will leave the company's depot on Pratt street, and return, making three trips each day."

In 1844, 14 years after this event—to the day—another great chapter in American history began, when in the first telegraph message in the world, "What Hath God Wrought," tapped out by Prof. S. F. B. Morse in Washington, was received in the same Baltimore & Ohio Pratt street station in Baltimore, from which the first horse-drawn train departed.

Added distinction was given this same day in 1931, when the Baltimore & Ohio inaugurated the first completely air-conditioned train in the world, the "Columbian," between Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

B. & O. Timetable For First U. S. Train

Office of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad,
20th May, 1830.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Railroad between Baltimore and Ellicotts' Mills will be opened for the transportation of passengers, on MONDAY, the 24th instant.

A brigade, or train of coaches, will leave the Company's Depot on Pratt-street, and return, making three trips each day—starting at the following hours precisely, viz:—

Leave Baltimore at	7 A. M.	and Ellicotts' at	9 A. M.
"	11 A. M.	" "	1 P. M.
"	4 P. M.	" "	6 P. M.

The price for the trip of twenty-six miles, will be seventy-five cents for each person. Tickets to be had at the Depot. Should the demand be found to exceed the present means of accommodation, passengers will be under the necessity of going and returning in the same coach, until a sufficient additional number of carriages can be furnished. As soon as this can be effected, of which due notice will be given, provision will be made for travelling a shorter distance than the whole trip.

Big Business Tearing Apart U. S., Cabot Says

New York, May 23 (AP).—Prof. Philip Cabot, of Harvard University, warned a group of retailers today that "large-scale business operations" have "set in motion economic forces which are tearing apart our social structure."

In an address before the management division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, Dr. Cabot compared the business organizations of the past and of the present, asserting there has been a change which has created a "critical problem."

Formerly, he said, business owners and employes operated on almost a partnership basis, knowing one another's problems intimately. But, he added: "In most large business today the guiding spirit lives in the stratosphere."

Dr. Cabot said that "the depression that we all feel is not due to economic causes and cannot be cured by economic 'patent medicine.' This depression is a symptom of our social failure.

"Our problem, in the light of our difficulties, resolves itself into the necessity for finding ways of dealing with each other like human beings, not like sticks and stones.

"Up to the last decade the economical abstractions worked so well that we forgot 'the society'—the people. During ten years of economic contraction we have discovered that our society is disintegrating under the strain of economic force. The guiding spirit of large business concerns is far too often ignorant of the social problems of his own business, and he cannot guide what he does not understand."

Coal Shutdown Hits Earnings of Norfolk & Western

Philadelphia, May 23 (AP).—The April statement of earnings of the Norfolk and Western Railway Co. reflected the shutdown in the bituminous coal industry. Net income for the month was $170,491, a decrease of $539,930, compared with April, 1938. Earned on common stock was 7 cents per share, compared with 45 cents per share in April last year.

For the four months of the present year, the net income was $5,567,318, an increase of $2,909,883 over 1938. Earned on common stock for the four months was $3.74 per share, compared with $1.67 in the same period last year.

Reading Co.

Net railway operating income of the Reading Co. for April was $653,622, a decrease of $156,430, compared with April last year. For the first four months of 1939 the net railway operating income was $3,212,880, a decrease of $1,134,437, compared with the same period last year.

Daily Oil Output Up 36,610 Barrels

Oklahoma production gained 10,095 barrels daily to 463,250. East Texas increased 50 to 372,348 and Texas as a whole rose 16,348 to 1,285,335. Illinois continued to swell production, gaining 3,850 barrels daily to 214,700. Kansas declined 690 to 175,550, Louisiana was off 2,275 to 267,335. California rose 5,500 to 625,750.

Wheat Prices Climb to Top For the Season

Closings Are at Best Levels Despite Heavy Profit-taking

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 23.—Persistent buying of wheat futures that uncovered stop-loss orders lifted prices as much as 1½ cents to a new high for the season today. The advance was retained despite liberal profit taking, wheat closing at the best levels of the day.

Some purchasing was associated with absence of fresh moisture in the Southwest and reports of higher temperatures and hot winds, but the disparity of futures prices compared with quotations for actual grain in the spot market and compared with the 1939 loan basis attracted much attention. Spot prices in some cases were 5 cents or more per bushel above July contracts, with No. 2 yellow hard quoted at 80½. The loan basis for No. 2 hard winter wheat here is 80 cents and many traders believe the rates, which are higher than last season, may prove to be an important factor.

Wheat closed 1⅛-1½ higher than yesterday, July 75⅝-75½, September 75-75¼, corn unchanged to ⅛ up, July 50½, September 51¼-51⅛, oats ⅝-¾ higher, rye 1¼-1½ higher, lard unchanged to 2 lower.

Cotton Futures Hold Steady in Narrow Range

New York, May 23 (AP).—Cotton futures leveled off at slightly higher prices today, propped by foreign buying, mill covering and some outside demand. Closing levels were unchanged to 1 points higher. Traders were content to keep operations at a minimum pending action by the House on agricultural appropriation bill, sent to a House-Senate conference after the close today.

Bombay was an active seller of July against offsetting purchases in March and May. Liverpool bought near months while Southern spot houses sold more distant deliveries. Widespread rains in the Southwest were classed as mildly unfavorable by some Southern spot interests.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures swerved to a forward trail today after early losses in the wake of lower lard and hog prices. Closing levels were 1 point up, helped by strength of grains and evidence of foreign buying of oil. Sales totaled 100 lots; July, 6.51 bid; September, 6.69; October, 6.73 bid; December, 6.78 bid.

Crude oil sold at 5½ cents in the Southeast, up ⅛ cent. At the close today the Southeast and valley quoted 5⅝ bid and Texas 5⅛ to 5¼.

Japan Accused Of Dumping Cloth

Treasury officials said yesterday that they were investigating complaints that Japan was dumping crude cotton cloth in the United States at less than fair market value. They said the complaints, coming from New York textile manufacturers, were under study both in New York and in Japan.

It is difficult, they added, to determine the fair market value of the cloth from a Japanese standpoint, because it apparently was manufactured in Japan only for export purposes, and there was no domestic Japanese price with which the export price could be compared. Officials said that if the shipments were found to violate antidumping provisions of the tariff law, they would assess heavy penalties against the merchandise.

Keystone Steel Buys Control of Nat'l Lock

Peoria, Ill., May 23.—The Keystone Steel & Wire Co. has acquired a controlling interest in the common stock of the National Lock Co., of Rockford, Ill., it was announced today by W. H. Sommer, president of Keystone.

The National Lock Co. manufactures a complete line of furniture, cabinet, refrigerator and stove-trim hardware, as well as a complete line of screws and bolts—a total of some 12,000 different items. The company has total assets of approximately $5,000,000, against which there is outstanding a 6 per cent bond issue amounting to $665,000 and two preferred stock issues totaling approximately $1,000,000. Current annual sales volume is around $4,000,000.

Lockheed Issues Report to Employes

Burbank, Calif., May 23.—As a further step in its employe-relations program, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation has distributed its first annual report to the employes of the company, it was announced today. The report was issued by Robert E. Gross, president of Lockheed, and encompassed all of the activities of the 12 months ended December 31, 1938.

The report showed that Lockheed's employes received wages and salaries during 1938 totaling $4,480,000. This was a 69 per cent increase over 1937, and represented 44 per cent of the company's entire income for 1938.

Stocks Recede Slightly in Dull Trading Aviation and Oil Shares Show Firmness Steels Are Weak Feature of the Day

New York, May 23.—Stocks eased today but in trading that was so dull and by an amount that was so small as to leave the pattern of the market the same as on other recent days. Only 423,130 shares changed hands on the big board and the composite average showed a recession of 0.13 point. Aviation stocks had a period of firmness but later joined in the downward trend. Oils were firm, despite the battle of words between Texas and Louisiana executives on the matter of production.

Steels were the weak feature and as was the case twice last week, their softness failed to cause corresponding unsettlement in the balance of the list. From a technical standpoint, this is regarded as favorable, for while the steel industry, and the securities of its companies, are having heavy weather, the shares of manufacturing companies and of the rails give some sign of being in a well liquidated condition. In any event, they are not following the steels, which is a reflection of the well known fact that the consumption industries are doing better than the heavy industries.

The relatively good behavior of the aviation stocks followed the announcement of another big order from the War Department.

Strike News

Strike news contributed its share to today's easing prices. The strike at the Briggs Manufacturing Co. plants in Detroit forced the closing of Chrysler plants in the same city and of the Lincoln division of the Ford Motor Co. In this connection the Street will follow with interest the effort of a major corporation to secure legal redress for damages alleged to have been sustained on account of a strike. This was the suit for $7,500,000 damages filed by the Republic Steel Corporation against the C. I. O. and its leaders.

President Roosevelt's speech before the American Retail Federation Forum was regarded generally in the Street as serving notice that the cause of tax reform will have to be fought without the aid, and probably with the active opposition, of the White House. In this connection the Chamber of Commerce of the United States points out that business has no illusions that tax revision will necessarily mean a lessening of the total amount of business taxes. A reduction in Governmental expenditures is the only cure for high taxes, but what is sought by business now is a readjustment of taxes to stimulate production and encourage investment in job-making enterprises.

New Deal to Go On

The President gave no hope of any such accomplishment, making it clear that the New Deal's policies will be continued and also implying in a strong manner that to carry them out he may seek re-election for a third term.

The reawakened popularity of the aviation shares was reflected today in the fact that five of the day's 15 most active stocks were of this industry.

Most of the motor and accessory stocks eased slightly, United States Rubber being the most active. Production of new models by the motor industry is cited by the bullish forces as one factor which may turn the business tide.

Among the commodities wheat was a big feature, absorbing profit taking sufficiently well to close at its best level of the day, up 1⅛ to 1½ cents a bushel. Corn held at about its former level and in the cotton market the close was barely steady, unchanged to 2 points higher.

The bond market improved a little today led by the industrials and better grade rails, with some strength also shown in the high grade utilities. Volume, however, was only slightly better than on Monday and low-priced issues were highly irregular.

In the foreign bond list gains predominated, running to 4 points for the Bulgarian 7s of 1967. Australian 5s were up 1 point and South American issues were firm. Both German and Japanese issues lost fractions.

Better-grade utilities that reached new highs included Consumers Power 3⅛s, New Orleans Public Service 5s, New York Gas, Electric Light & Power 4s of 1949 and Southwest Bell Telephone 3s. New York Edison 3¼s were higher and the Laclede Gas 6s of 1942, series B, gained 1¼ points.

B. & O. issues were higher and Florida Centra. gained 1¼. Mobile and Ohio issues were strong and Union Pacific first 4s gained ¾ point.

Pressed Steel Car 5s for '51 dropped 7½ points to a new low for the yea. Among the industrials to push above their yearly highs were Consolidated Oil 3⅛s, Kinney convertible 5½s, Purity Bakeries 5s and Tennessee Coal, Iron & Rixx Railroad 5s. Childs Co. debenture 5s were up 1⅝.

United States Treasury issues were generally higher, gains running to 2-32 for the 3⅛s '48-'46.

Santa Fe Votes $2.50 Per Share On 5% Preferred

New York, May 23 (AP).—Directors of Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway today declared a dividend of $2.50 a share on 5 per cent noncumulative preferred stock, payable August 1 to holders of record June 23. A payment of $1 a share was made on the preferred February 1 last and of $2.50 in August last year.

The company said that the dividend was declared out of undivided net profits for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939. "While undivided net profits are determined at the present time for only the first ten months of that fiscal year, they seem clearly sufficient to protect this payment," it was added.

Fred G. Gurley was elected vice president and will act as general executive assistant to E. J. Engel, president. Kurley had been assistant vice president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

Electric Boat

Directors of Electric Boat Co. declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock, payable June 21 to holders of record June 7. The previous payment of 60 cents last December was the only dividend ordered in 1938.

Houdaille-Hersey.

Directors of Houdaille-Hersey Corp., makers of automotive equipment, today declared an interim dividend of 25 cents a share on class "B" no-par stock, payable June 26 to holders of record June 15. Previous payment on class "B" stock was 37½ cents a share on December 15, 1937. Directors also ordered the regular quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share on class "A" no-par stock, payable July 1 to record June 20.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube

Youngstown, Ohio, May 23 (AP). Quarterly preferred dividends of $1.37½ a share were declared by Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., directors said today. The directors passed up payments again on the company's common stock.

Mission Corporation

Directors of Mission Corporation, oil holding company, today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on common stock, payable June 29 to holders of record June 9. In 1938 a single dividend of $1 a common share was paid June 29.

Packard Credits Newspaper Ads

Detroit, May 23.—Increased activity in automobile purchases in many parts of the country was reported here today by Packard Motor Car Co., which recently announced price reductions. For the first 20 days of May, according to M. M. Gilman, president, Packard deliveries have risen 67 per cent over deliveries for the same period last month.

Newspapers alone carried the announcement of Packard's new policy, and the company's officials today credited the dailies with sending the motoring public to the display rooms for demonstrations.

Rail Crossing Deaths Fewer This Year

Fatalities resulting from highway-railroad grade-crossing accidents in the first two months this year totaled 256, a decrease of one fatality compared with the corresponding period last year, the safety section of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

In the first two months this year 802 persons were injured in such accidents, compared with 870 in the corresponding period in 1938. Accidents at highway-railroad grade crossings in the two months' period this year totaled 660, a decrease of 12, compared with the first two months in the preceding year.

Rayon Only Textile to Gain In 13 Years

Silk, Wool, Cotton Consumption Falls During Same Period

New York, May 23.—Rayon is the only one of the four major textile fibers which has bettered its competitive position over the past 13 years, according to an analysis today by the Standard Statistics Co.

During the period from 1926 through 1938, cotton consumption fell off not only in pounds but also in its share of total consumption, which dropped from 87.3 per cent to 81.4 per cent. In these same years the use of wool decreased from 9.3 per cent of the total to 7.9 per cent. Silk use over these 13 years fell from 1.8 per cent of total fiber consumption to 1.5 per cent.

While these three fibers, cotton, wool and silk, were suffering a decrease in public consumption, rayon use increased from 60,600,000 pounds in 1926 to 327,100,000 pounds in 1938 and its share of the total market last year was 9.2 per cent, against only 1.6 per cent in 1926.

Sick Most Affected

While widespread public acceptance of rayon textiles has been at the expense of cotton and wool to some extent, silk has been more seriously affected by rayon competition. Demand for silk decreased from more than 66,000,000 pounds in 1926 to 52,000,000 pounds in 1938 and reductions in rayon prices forced silk prices downward 73 per cent in this period.

Because public acceptance of rayon has grown so rapidly, demand has frequently outrun production. This has led to a steady annual increase in productive facilities. Although the rate of expansion is now tending to slow down, it is estimated that completions of additions contemplated or under way will raise the operating capacity to 400,000,000 pounds a year by the spring of 1940, compared with 370,000,000 pounds at the end of 1938 and 350,000,000 pounds at the 1937 year-end. It is not believed, however, that this expansion will result in excessive capacity in the industry.

Good Merchandising

The industry's ability to market output despite rapid plant expansion is due in part to the natural demand for a synthetic textile, cheaper than silk and wool, and of attractive appearance. In addition, managements have been both progressive and aggressive in merchandising activities. Rayon consumption has been stimulated by collective promotional activities, and individual producers have created and maintained consumer demand through adoption of distinctive trade names and extensive advertising campaigns.

Originally introduced as a substitute for silk, rayon has now received consumer acceptance on its own merits. The industry produces two important types of yarn, viscose and acetate, obtained by different methods of manufacture. A third type, cuprammonium, is as yet only a small factor.

War Is Avoidable For the Present, Aldrich Declares

New York, May 23 (AP).—Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, recently home from Europe, asserted today he believed that "war will be avoided at this time." He gave the Bond Club of New York three reasons for his belief:

"The people in Europe do not want a war; the British and French have at last determined to take a stand against the axis powers; the European countries opposing the axis powers are showing an improved financial position, particularly France."

To help Germany and Italy solve their economic problems, Aldrich suggested: "The United States should work toward trade agreements with the 'have-not' countries." He said the "have" countries might lower their trade barriers first, thereby buying from the "have-nots" to furnish funds for an increase of international trade.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Ahoy!—And how are your sea legs?

Or in other words, the good ship S. S. Potomac will set sail at 8:45 tonight for a moonlight (we hope) cruise down the Potomac carrying employes of the Interior Department, Public Works Administration, United States Housing Authority and Bituminous Coal Commission. It's sponsored by the Interior Recreation Association and it's the first of the season. There'll be dancing and entertainment aplenty.

And right on the heels of this announcement comes another reminder that more big doings are scheduled aboard the S. S. Potomac come Thursday, June 1, at 8:45 p. m. This time it's the Washington Chapter, Society for Advancement of Management and the Society of Personnel Administration who are sponsoring the moonlight (we still hope) trip. But this time a full moon is guaranteed along with swing music and beer.

Treasury Local No. 11, U. F. W. A., invites the public—and of course, all members—to a party tomorrow night at 8 in the local's headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street northwest. There'll be motion pictures—a newsreel and comedy—lots of refreshments and fun.

We noticed in the Internal Revenue News Letter an expression of sympathy to the bereaved family of Deputy Commissioner John R. Kirk, killed May 16 in an auto accident. It just reminds us what sorrow and tragedy can come from carelessness on the highway. Mr. Kirk was an innocent victim and it should serve as a warning to us all to mind our P's and Q's when we get behind a steering wheel.

Come next Saturday and the District Branch of the First Division Society celebrates the anniversary of the Battle of Cantigny with a dinner and dance in the Robert E. Lee Room, Lee House. A feature of the program will be the presentation of a sword to Cadet Col. Gordon L. Calvert, of Roosevelt High School. The presentation is an annual affair and is made to the cadet who attains highest honors in military science at any of the local high schools.

Luther C. Steward, national president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, will be honor guest tonight at a dinner meeting of Agriculture Branch, Union No. 2, in Barker Hall Y. W. C. A. Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer, also will attend. It promises to be a gala affair.

An illustrated lecture on "The Union Pacific Steam-Turbine-Electric Locomotive" will be given at 3 p. m. today by Howard B. Blanchard, Washington representative of the Union Pacific Railroad, at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Columbia Alumni To Hear Hu Shih

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, will be the chief speaker at the annual dinner-dance of the Columbia University Alumni Club of Washington to be held at the Shoreham Hotel at 7:30 p. m. today.

Guests of honor, all Columbia graduates, will include Assistant Secretary of State Berle, Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Rumanian Minister Irimescu and Associate Justice Stone.

Argo Lodge to Hear Rabbi Ephraim Fischoff

Rabbi Ephraim Fischoff, director of the Cornell University Hillel Foundation, will discuss "Jewish Survival in an Age of Chaos," at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at a meeting of Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, in the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

Bob Burns Says—

One thing that makes us so proud of America is that our youngsters can go off to them public summer camps. Before my boy went this year I had to take him for a physical check-up. And I'm tellin' you the doctors nowadays sure are well equipped. It just made me wonder how old Doc Tabor down home ever got so many folks well with just his brains and little black bag.

One time Uncle Fud had so many pains that old Doc made him wrap one of those long, roller paper towels around his body. And then he had Uncle Fud take a pin and punch holes in the paper everwhere he hurt. Then he put Fud to bed, and he started to look around for his paper towel to make his diagonsis, but he couldn't find it. He finally asked Aunt Sophie and she said, "Oh, was that what that was? Why, I put that roll on the player piano and it played 'Jeepers Creepers.'"

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Thirteen-card suits are not nearly so rare as they should be. No one knows exactly why, but the mathematicians, whose odds against thirteen of a suit falling to any one player are well up in the millions, are rather put out about it. They insist that many of the reported fairly dealt 13-carders are no less than the schemes of practical jokers who turn cowards when the denouement takes place.

On the strength of the mathematical wizards' computations, Ely Culbertson offered, with the publication of the first issue of the "Gold Book," $5, and an autographed copy of "Contract Bridge Complete" to any one holding a bona fide 13-carder. The influx of mail grew so steep, he regretfully and somewhat skeptically withdrew the offer.

The fact that almost all of the recorded 13-card suits are in spades lends added weight to the doubts of the mathematicians. Why spades? Why not diamonds, hearts or clubs?

This tends not only to bolster suspicion as regards the legitimacy of such holdings, but also to point out the feebleness of invention in petty deceptions.

However many players are deluded into believing they were dealt the perfect hand, there is always a true incident, which is something less than fiction, to delight and dismay the victim at the same time.

"Why must it have been clubs?" cries young Wheeler, student at Wesleyan University, speaking of today's hand. "Why, when I was dealt 13 cards, did it have to be in the lowest suit in the deck?"

Wheeler's experience, which is characteristic of the puckishness of life, resulted in his defending against the adversaries' grand slam at spades with his 13 clubs—an ignominious ending for the most extraordinary hand in the dictionary of bridge distribution.

Payton K. Bishop, who made the lucky grand slam, a fraternity brother of Wheeler, writes of the incident from the Sigma Nu House. He says:

"We believe we have a hand here that you will not wish to pass up.

This hand was actually dealt on the level.

"Bishop's three-diamond opening was merely a conventional asking-bid for the ace. Wheeler's bid explains itself. Dixon's double was due to the fact that he knew three aces were out against Wheeler (he figured Bishop for an ace in spades because he naturally could not have opened with a three bid without it.)

"Dixon had not the slightest suspicion that Wheeler had hit the jackpot. Bishop's seven-spade bid was through reasoning: (1) Dixon's double wiped out either his diamond or heart loser with an ace, (2) that Wheeler had either his seven-club bid pat or very near so, (3) and that a sacrifice bid of seven spades could at the most forfeit 100 points; he had 150 honors, too.

"Bowman's double was on his blank in clubs, his singleton diamond a possible heart trick and the probable fact that Bishop's seven-spade bid was in itself a sacrifice.

"Wheeler is regularly praying these nights that God will put it in spades next time."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

While Peg was in his arms, Hewitt's memory rushed over the previous days. He had been glad that Peg had left the office, for his ambitions to become a money-eyed man were growing. He had gone to look at a place where he intended to build a home. Then he had remembered that Thalia was becoming more insistent with him. Finally, he rushed to Peg's home. As he held her he asked her to marry him, and Peg consented. They went back into the living room and told Aunt Mehalia. Anthony, who had come in, stood silent for a moment; then rushed from the house. Peg and Hewitt had tentatively fixed the wedding date for the coming spring.

CHAPTER XVII.

IN THAT last lovely week of November, with pure white snow covering the city, hanging on the trees like fleecy blankets, Peg hadn't thought anything more about the card which she had taken out of Nadeja's gold chatelaine. It had floated around her room, more or less . . . on a table, in a drawer, on the mantel.

She had put it finally in the wide compartment of the old maple wigstand in her room, thinking that some time she'd tell Duncan what she had done and ask him what he thought about it. But so many things had happened that week. She forgot the card.

First, Duncan had been found drunk and would give no explanation for it. Hewitt had come that next morning, had held her in his arms and had asked her to marry him.

There had been night school and several girls up from Richmond. Aunt Mehalie had her Dames meeting, which had meant a full day of housecleaning and cookie baking and sandwich making.

And there had been a Thanksgiving dinner, with Anthony sitting across the table from her. At first he had declined Aunt Mehalie's invitation, but when she had called again and said that a Thanksgiving dinner was just no dinner at all without a man to carve the turkey, that Hewittt was dining that day at a brokers' banquet, he had accepted.

Peg hadn't wanted to be alone with Anthony that night, but somehow Joan and Aunt Mehalie had disappeared together and there she was with Anthony's blue eyes on her, with his mouth smiling in a sort of hurt tenderness.

He didn't stay long. They talked of a few completely safe topics. Then he got into his big coat and stood there in the hall, twirling the snap-brim felt in his fingers. "Try to talk some bat's brains into Joan, will you, Peg?" he said evenly. "That job of hers is pretty tough going. Eight to six. On her feet all day. She's still a growing girl. Needs rest and outdoor exercise."

He paused and smiled a little. "It'll be a hard assignment for you, of course. I understand Duncan took her to a club one night and to the movies another. On the strength of that you probably won't be able to blast her out."

Then he was gone, closing the door softly behind him. She had stood there a long time, not looking at anything in particular. Just feeling his heartbreak; knowing that he loved her! Knowing that there wasn't anything she could do about it.

Hewitt Promoted

Mr. Nelson did want Peg back in the office. And Hewitt had insisted that she return. That first morning, when Peg sat behind her desk, Mr. Nelson had said gruffly: "Well, for some one who was on the verge of death you look downright buxom, Peg. Just what sort of a temperamental jag was that young lady?"

Peg had said she was sorry, that it wouldn't happen again.

"Well by jinks, it had better not," Mr. Nelson had told her. "I might put up with such nonsense, but you can bet your best red-topped boots that Hewitt Gill won't. Beginning tomorrow, he's one of the partners around her, Peg." His eyes had narrowed then, waiting for her reaction.

She asked breathlessly, "Does Hewitt know?"

"Nope. Not yet. But I'm going to tell him in a few minutes. And watch him strut. These young squirts make me sick, really."

No, she hadn't thought of Nadeja's card at all that week. She was surprised that morning in the office waiting for Hewitt to come in so he could hear what Mr. Nelson had to tell him, to glance at a newspaper and read that Count Paul Stranyan, was was assaulted just a few hundred yards from his embassy last Friday night and who had been unconscious for a week, was improving at Emergency Hospital.

Her mind took this in; it did not move backward to verify it by any clues; nor forward to anticipate a personal reaction. But soon she began putting the pieces of this strange information together and finding that they fit. She remembered that it was Friday night when she had gone to that cocktail lounge with Paul; that it was on Friday she had taken the card from Nadeja's bag. Her blue eyes raced over the article then but there was nothing more in it. There must have been something, she decided quickly, in last Saturday's papers.

What She Learns

She put on her hat and coat and ran swiftly out of the office, a strange fear moving like a shadow through her mind. At the newspaper office she hurried through the piles of newspapers on the counter. She found the Saturday editions, stood staring strickenly at the headlines. At the photograph of Stranyan on the first page. She read every word of the detailed account. Paul Stranyan evidently had been walking back to the embassy just a little before midnight. Some one had given him a bad crack on his head, had beaten him unmercifully, had dragged him up an alley where the police had found him at dawn. The motive, the papers had decided, couldn't have been robbery. Nevertheless he had been searched. His pockets were inside out, the lining of his coat slit, his trousers cut. There was a girl's coat near him, too. It bore a Richmond, Va., label. The newspaper alleged the theory that there might have been a woman with the Count, that they had fallen into the hands of a maniac with homicidal tendencies.

On the same page, just a little to the left of the Stranyan article, Peg saw a small paragraph with a tiny picture of a familiar face. The article said that Homer Tate, night-club waiter, had been slugged in the alley back of a hotel and been robbed. After treament at a hospital he had been returned to his home.

Peg's hand closed over her mouth. Paul Stranyan beaten and searched. The night-club waiter, who had mopped up the havoc of her accident, beaten and robbed. Then suddenly, going horribly, sickeningly cold, Peg knew, just as plainly as if someone had told her, that Nadeja had missed the card out of her bag. That it was the men with her who had attacked Paul Stranyan and the waiter. They were looking for that card with the queer message. A card so important that they would stop at nothing, not even a murderous attack, to get it back.

She was in a sort of daze as she left the newspaper building. She found herself looking at every man on the street . . . seeing in each of them something dark and foreign and sinister. She thought, in a panic of indecision: "What shall I do?" And, of course, being a woman, she thought of the wrong thing. She would realize that later . . . too late. But now she hurried into a telephone booth, called her office and told Mr. Nelson that she wouldn't be back until after lunch.

"Certainly, certainly," said Mr. Nelson, sarcastically. "Take a day off, take a week—a month. This is only an office. We just have work to do here. A small, unimportant thing like running a brokerage office. I suppose you're about to tell me you've had a relapse!" Peg wheedled and cajoled and Mr. Nelson finally said: "All right, then," and hung up with a bang.

At the Hospital

Peg went straight to the hospital. She had to talk to Paul. She had to know if he had seen the men who had attacked him.

Paul Stranyan was sitting up in a room banked with flowers. A pretty little nurse, starchy and blondely efficient, was reading aloud to him. Peg's heart thumped painfully as she looked at Paul's bandaged face. He was glad to see her. His dark eyes smiled at her, but his mouth, caught tight with bandages, did not move. She asked the nurse to step out of the room a moment, and when she was gone Peg went up close to the bed and began asking questions.

"Was there more than one man, Paul?"

He nodded yes.

"Tall and dark—maybe three men?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"You didn't really see them, did you? I didn't think so. Came up behind you?"

He nodded. His dark eyes were puzzled now, asking her what she knew about all this. She said quickly, "I can't tell you anything just yet, Paul. But I think I know what happened. Who was responsible I'll let you know everything later. Just as soon as I'm very sure."

She stayed 15 minutes. Then she bent swiftly, kissed him on the crown of his head with a guilty, aching compassion, and left. She would, she decided, go straight across the street to the State Department and see Anthony.

An Old Lady

She hurried out of his room and down the corridor. Turning the corner, she collided with a small, enormous bunch of flowers wrapped in green cellophane. She said: "Oh, please excuse me . . ." and hurried on.

Out on the street she glanced behind her once, satisfied herself that no tall, sinister figure was following her. She didn't even see the little old lady come out of the hospital door, stand there in the shadow of the massive doorway until Peg turned the corner and then, tossing her flowers into a refuse can near the curb, quietly pad along at a discreet distance behind her.

FBI Launches Newsprint Trust Inquiry

Investigation of West Coast Producers and Distributors Ordered

By the United Press.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is studying the $100,000,000 newsprint industry, the Justice Department revealed last night in ordering a grand jury at San Francisco to investigate whether Pacific Coast producers and distributors are violating the antitrust laws. Hearings may begin early in June.

Assistant Attorney General Arnold said the department would ask grand jury action in other parts of the country if the general FBI investigation indicated conspiracies in restraint of trade.

"Most Canadian and domestic manufacturers of newsprint follow certain uniform practices which raise serious questions under the Federal antitrust laws," Arnold said. "Manufacturers and distributors in the Pacific Coast area not only conform to these practices but also engage in other activities which appear to be in violation of the Sherman act. Hence the department is taking separate action in respect to each of these situations."

International Repercussions

Arnold indicated the inquiry may have international repercussions as the United States imports three-fourths of its newsprint supplies, mostly from Canada.

"Some evidence secured by the Federal Trade Commission," he said, "indicates that concerted action by Canadian manufacturers restrains freedom of competition in the United States newsprint market. Other evidence tends to show that certain United States manufacturers and distributors co-operate with Canadian producers to maintain prices in this country."

Arnold said that if it appeared that "this uniformity of prices and trade practices results from conditions beyond the jurisdiction of the department, the facts secured will be submitted to Congress, so that it may consider whether legislation is necessary to insure United States publishers adequate supplies of newsprint at reasonable prices."

Criminal Action Seen

Arnold said that if restraints to trade are found, "criminal proceedings should result in the establishment of free competition," with resultingly lower newsprint prices on the Pacific Coast.

Price increases in the last three years have increased the cost of newsprint 20 per cent and have forced some newspapers to hike advertising and subscription rates.

President Asks Funds For Six Assistants

President Roosevelt yesterday notified Congress he plans to appoint soon six Administration assistants "with a passion for anonymity" when he asked for money to pay their salaries.

In a special budget request, Mr. Roosevelt asked for $98,000, to provide salaries of $10,000 each for the six assistants and two additional secretaries, Marvin A. McIntyre and Stephen T. Early, and funds for secretarial, travel and incidental expenses.

Goodwill Services

The Rev. J. M. Gillum, of Brookland Methodist Church, will address the Goodwill Industries Chapel services today at 8:15 a. m. in the auditorium at 1218 New Hampshire avenue. Friday morning's speaker will be the Rev. Charles F. Phillips, St. Paul's Methodist Church.

Spellman Enthroned as New Archbishop of New York

50 of U. S. Heirarchy See Former Grocer Boy Installed by Cicognani

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 23.—While the Te Deum of a great choir rose to mighty schoes under the high nave of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Francis Joseph Spellman, a former grocer's boy, was enthroned today as spiritual leader of 1,000,000 communicants in the Catholic Archdiocese of New York.

He entered the great cathedral on Fifth avenue at the end of a half-hour procession, walking in under the dipped colors of a National Guard regiment.

Mgr. Cicognani Officiates

In an age-old ceremony he kissed the altar stone and then from the choir thundered the antiphon:

"O thou priest and bishop, thou worker of mighty works, thou good shepherd over God's people, pray for us unto the Lord."

Then the archbishop himself cried out the ancient chant:

"O God, who didst send forth thy blessed confessor and Bishop Patrick to preach thy glory among the Gentiles, mercifully grant unto us, for his sake and at his petition, whatsoever thou commandest us to do, to have grace and power faithfully to fulfill the same. Through our Lord Jesus Christ, thy son, who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end."

Then came the actual installation by the most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate to this country.

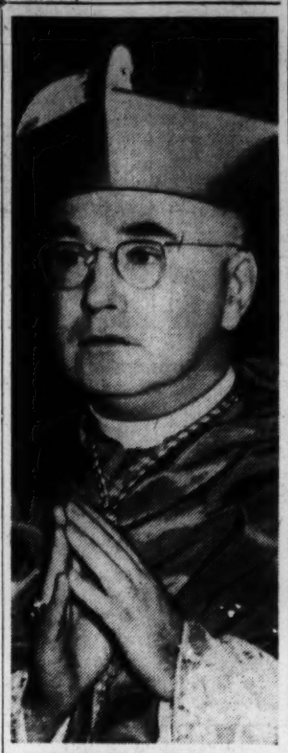
50 Bishops Present

All the pageantry and the solemn ritual handed down through the centuries of church history were unfolded before the worshipful thousands who pressed into the Cathedral and overflowed into the streets.

The elevation of Bishop Spellman brought to St. Patrick's the greatest assemblage of the hierarchy since the pontifical mass of requiem was said last year for Patrick Cardinal Hayes—some 50 bishops and archbishops and hundreds of the lesser clergy.

It was to the archbishopric of Cardinal Hayes that Bishop Spellman was appointed by Pope Pius XII.

Vatican City, May 23 (AP).—A Vatican news service said today Pope Pius XII probably would summon a consistory in November to fill some of the 11 vacancies in the College of Cardinals.



ARCHBISHOP SPELLMAN,

It was believed almost certain that one of the red hats would go to the Most Rev. Francis Joseph Spellman, newly installed Archbishop of New York.

It was considered possible the Pope might decide to increase the number of United States cardinals to five. In such an event it was believed that the Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, would be the most likely choice.

Britain Again Notifies U.S. It Can't Pay on Debt

In a brief note presented to Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, notified the United States that the British government again finds it impossible to resume payments of its defaulted $5,000,000,000 World War debt to this country.

The note stated that the British government "will be willing to reopen discussions on the subject whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached." The semiannual installment on the debt is due June 15.

Republic Sues Lewis and CIO For 7½ Million

Damages Claimed in 1937 Steel Strike Which Took 16 Lives

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 23.—Tom Girdler sent John L. Lewis a $7,500,000 bill today for the 1937 steel strike.

Girdler's Republic Steel Corporation filed a Federal court suit against Lewis, his Congress of Industrial Organizations and many of its union leaders, demanding the huge damages for "knowingly, maliciously, recklessly, wantonly and willfully" acting to shut down the Nation's third largest steel producer.

Dunned for Wages

Only a week ago Lewis' C. I. O. dunned Republic for $7,500,000 in back wage claims filed with the National Labor Relations Board. C. I. O. contended the amount was due strikers under a labor board reinstatement order, opposed by the corporation.

Another $2,500,000 in personal injury and death damage suits has been asked of Republic as the outcome of the violent steel strike which took 16 lives and cost the company an estimated $5,000,000 in potential profits.

Today's suit, possibly the largest ever brought against a labor union, declared leaders and strikers violated restraint of trade sections of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust acts.

700 Named Defendants

Nearly 700 persons, most of them Ohioans, were named defendants along with C. I. O.'s steel workers organizing committee and its Amalgamated Association of Sheet, Iron and Tin Workers.

The widespread strike, which at its peak threw 100,000 workers into idleness at plants of Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Inland Steel, collapsed when National Guardsmen were called out in Ohio to protect men desiring to return to work.

S. W. O. C. demanded a signed contract, which it has not obtained. The companies stressed their willingness to bargain with the Lewis unions but contended the Wagner act did not require contractural relations.
